War Summary of The Latest Events

Fresnoy village remains in German hands. The Canadians, it now appears, were not on this section of the line, but farther north. According to Stewart Lyon, a single British battalion had to bear the brunt of an overwhelming attack on the village, and was compelled to fall back.

Hindenburg concentrated every available gun on Fresnoy defences, and by this means was able to blast his way once more into the village. A storm of gas shells, high explosives and shrapnels prepared the way for the German infantry attack. Fresh Bavarian troops were brought up after the first assault on the British line, and swept forward in massed formation, the English troops retiring sullenly and slowly, fighting their machine guns to the last as they passed through the smoking ruins of Fresnoy, which was no longer tenable.

The French carried five hundred yards of German trenches northwest of Rheims and took one hundred prisoners belonging to four different regiments. In the St. Gobain Forest and on the Chemin-des-Dames the guns carried on a lively engagement during the day. Artillery actions occurred at several points on the Belgian section of the line. At Dixmude, Steenstraete and Hetsas grenade duels took place.

In Southern Bukowina the Russians are showing signs of renewed activity. The Austrian report tells of clashes with Russian reconnoitring parties.

From Fresnoy to Gavrelle the Germans have been using up large forces of reserves in attempts to halt the British advance. Reuter's correspondent at the front states that since

ODESSA.

The many friends of Hartman Snider will be sorry to hear that he passed away last Saturday morning in the General Hospital, Kingston, after an illness of only one week, and being there three days. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from his late residence, to Cataragui, where the remains were placed in the vault to await interment. Mr. Snider had been a resident of the village for six years and will be greatly missed. Fred Sproule, Toronto, spent a few days with his parents last week.

Mrs. Geo. Ettinger, Kingston, who has been spending the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Watts, returned to her home last Saturday. Frederick Sproule, Saskatchewan, spent a few days with his brother at his old home.

Mrs. Wm. Jenkins, Napanee, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Watts.

Miss Hattie Henzy and Mrs. (Dr.) H. E. Day, Kingston, called on their relatives and friends last Tuesday.

Miss Amey Aylesworth has returned from spending the winter in Toronto, and Rochester.

puts the fighting strength of Hindenburg's army on the Western front at 157 divisions. As the German divisions now mainly consist of only three regiments each, or about nine thousand rifles, the total troops at the disposal of the German Commander in France and Flanders is about a million and a half.

In Macedonia, at the Cerna bend, the French, Russian and Italian forces delivered four attacks on the Bulgarian positions, according to a Bulgarian official report of Tuesday. The Paris report denies that the French made an attack at the Cerna bend. The Bulgarian despatch claims success over the Allied forces.

A German peace offer will be made on Monday by the Chancellor, says an Amsterdam despatch. The Exchange Telegraph says it has been confirmed that Germany and her allies are about to make another attempt to secure peace. While German statesmen are arranging terms of settlement with their allies Hindenburg is making heroic efforts to hold the line as a military factor in the overtures for peace.

The submarine peril accounted last week for the loss of forty-six British merchant ships, sixteen fishing vessels and a mine-sweeper. Of the merchant vessels sunk twenty-four were of sixteen hundred tons each and over, and twenty-two of less than sixteen hundred tons each. This shows a substantial reduction as compared with the returns of the previous week. Word has been received at New York of the sinking of the six-thousand-ton Brit-

Sewer Notice!

TAKE NOTICE that,—

1. The Council of the Corporation of the Town of Napanee intends to construct as a local improvement a sewer on West street, between Ann and Thomas streets, and intends to specially assess a part of the cost upon the land abutting directly on the work.

2. The estimated cost of the work is $2190.00, of which $1151.28 is to be paid by the Corporation. The estimated special rate per foot frontage is 26c. The special assessment is to be paid in twenty annual instalments.

3. A petition against the work will not avail to prevent its construction.

red tons each. This shows a substantial reduction as compared with the returns of the previous week. Word has been received at New York of the sinking of the six-thousand-ton British tank steamship San Urbano, built in 1913. The vessel left an American port on April 12th, and was sunk by a submarine while on her way to the United Kingdom. Forty-eight men were aboard, but no mention is made as to their fate.

Allied air supremacy once more has been secured. For a time there was considerable anxiety regarding the success in the development of aircraft by the Germans. This was due in part to the organization of the flying corps, which in Britain and France has been considerably improved. In a campaign in which guns play such a dominating part effective artillery work is impossible for the army that does not control the air.
As a retreating army the Germans have the range of fixed positions, such as villages and hills, but cannot get the range of mobile batteries. The great feature of the Allied advance is the railway gun—the big gun that follows the advancing troops on a railway especially built to facilitate closest contact with the enemy's line.
Without the aid of aerial scouts and signallers the position of these guns cannot be located by German gunners.

*****

Anti-submarine devices and inventions of British experts give promise of success in coping with the German undersea campaign, according to the chief naval member of the British War Mission, Rear-Admiral Sir Dudley de Chair. He stated that British and American inventors were working along similar lines. He is confident that the antidote to the German submarine peril will be found.

The situation in Russia shows signs of reverting to normal. The Provisional Government has issued a statement favoring a Coalition Ministry.
The fusion of the proletariat and the intellectuals may be hastened by this step. The absorption of the malcontents may be accomplished by including more of their leaders in the administration. The revolution was engineered by intellectuals like Miliuk-off, but there are indications that the workers and soldiers are not satisfied to allow the control of affairs to remain in the hands of this class. Increased representation of the common people in the Ministry has been adopted in other Allied countries as an essential step towards greater national unity in time of war. In taking the initiative the Provisional Government of Russia may have been guided in its decision by the Socialists and trades union leaders, who have been sent on a special mission to Petrograd by the British and French Governments. Russia is closing her ranks against a separate peace, the fervent hope of the Germans since the revolution.

German estimates of Hindenburg's losses put the figure at seven thousand in all. The people of Germany are kept in the dark as to the enormous sacrifices made by their troops in the defence of the Hindenburg line.
The actual losses in prisoners alone on the Aisne, between April 8th and April 28th, has been nineteen thousand.

A Great Brotherhood.

A commendable feature of the work of the Y. M. C. A. amongst that it is entirely non-sectarian. The only passport required the help of the Associated is NEED. Any fellow hungry, cold, suffering, appeals to this helpful organization, and straightway resources are placed at his disposal. That is the sort of brotherly appeals to one's sympathies; hence Nananee and County of Addington people are responding to the appeal for funds to is work amongst the soldiers. Nananee boys in their letters those returned from the front, are loud in their praises of the of the Y. M. C. A. If anyone has been over-looked in the funds, upon 17th inst., or if anyone who declined, when called on tribute has since reconsidered the matter, Mr. Checkley, Mgr. chants Bank will gladly receive and acknowledge subscriptions. ominations and religious bodies make use of the Y. M. C. A. tary camps. Roman Catholics, Protestants, Jews, all take turns of religious services and communication in the huts or tents ociation.

Following from the British weekly tells its own story—THE CARDINAL AND THE RED TRIANGLE. A tribute could be paid to the work of the Y. M. C. A. ur soldiers than that most eloquently expressed by Cardinal the opening of Catholic hut at Richmond Camp on the 10th e said; "He would like again that day to pay the same trihe had already paid in the past to the magnificent work he soldiers all over the world by the Y. M. C. A. He had reaw how helpful they had been to their Catholic soldiers, and ts had been made by that Association to meet those needs e so suddenly upon the nation, and which could not have been y other way.

Experience

Overland

Back of this season's new Overlands are a direct line of nine preceding models from which they were developed.

They directly continue the line of models that made the Overland name stand in the public mind for integrity of value.

Overland policy has steadfastly SUSTAINED that integrity of value in the car throughout its entire service in the hands of owners.

Over three hundred thousand of these cars are now in use and the helpful suggestions of their owners and of the more than four thousand dealer and factory-branch organizations that sold and served them, are largely responsible for the balanced greatness of this season's models.

Their new beauty, their perfected easy riding qualities, their proven sturdiness and mechanical excellence, their admitted tire, fuel and oil economy make them worthy of the confidence we enjoy, that they will still further enhance Overland prestige.

They embody the wisdom of the unmatched Overland experience in building cars of this type.

They are dominant values, cars of proven dependability and sterling worth.

Canadians Capture Sector proves Their Position

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS, May 8.—By a surprise at Sunday morning the battalion that part of our front is lying south of the Souchez captured an important sector enemy front line and supplied some distance to the east. A region south-west of Lens, ground was gained, is dotted with ruins of mining villages most every house has been formed into a miniature of the introduction of machine operated from the shelter emplacements. The garrison hold these posts do not suffer they die at their places by guns, fighting to the end. Still has men of that type, sell their lives for the unit they can exact.

It was to avoid, as much as possible, the concentration of gun fire on our attacking front the enemy's trench was assaulted was completely captured. Our men went in with bayonets and cleared the trench after a sharp fight. The one officer and thirty-three were captured. Possession of the ground was regarded by the enemy as so important that twice the night he counter-attacked but efforts failed and the Germans are known to be heavy.

The ground won improves position.

The systematic burning of things of value in and around continues from day to day. The enemy seems likely to be strong enough to make good his nothing of France's most important mining region will be left smoking waste when he goes.

RIOT IN MONTREAL.

Disloyal Citizens Hooted Men Who Were Recruiting.

MONTREAL, May 8.—Hon. P. E. Blondin made his first public speech in Montreal Monday night at the Monument Nationale before an audience which filled all the seats. Sir Louis Taillon, former Prime Minister of the Province of Quebec, was the chairman. There were speakers whose names are household words in many parts of Canada, men like Major-General F. L. Lessard, Senator Charles Beaubien, Senator Dandurand, Hon. Jeremie De Carie, also returned officers of French Canada's 22nd Battalion, such as Captains MacKay, Papineau, and Gustave Lanclot; yet, withal, the meeting turned into scenes that mark it as one of the most stormy since the war, and one at which an organized effort was shown against the principles for which the speakers were pleading. No one was respected. At times it seemed that in the gallery trouble of the most serious kind would result. Only the level-headed restraint of the military men, officers and privates, who controlled the gallery, prevented a situation that could have ended in blood.

There was a large police force present, and while two night sticks would have put a strong damper on the effervescence, the police did absolutely nothing. Captain MacKay Papineau was hissed continuously until he was forced to retire for the time being. In his speech he had said that Quebec had not done its duty, and was proceeding when he was prevented by storms of hisses and yelling from finishing the sentence.

AID FROM UNCLE SAM.

Nine Regiments Will Go To France in Near Future.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Nine new regiments of army engineers, to be composed exclusively of highly-trained railway men, will be the first American troops to be sent to France. They will go "at the earliest possible moment," the War Department announced Monday, for work on communication lines, but speculations as to exactly when or to what points they will be sent is forbidden because of the submarine menace.

The new forces will be volunteers, raised at the nine great railway centres of the country. Each regiment will be commanded by an engineer colonel of the regular army, aided by an adjutant. All other officers will be railway engineers or officials.

The expedition will have a total strength of between 11,000 and 12,000 men, each regiment being composed of two battalions of three companies each. Every branch of railway workers necessary to the building or operation of lines will be represented in the ranks, and the War Department expects a response to the call that will permit a careful selection to be exercised and insure a force already trained to the minute, an army of experts in railway operation.

Recruiting for the regiments and the organization of each force will be directly under the colonel of each regiment. Recruiting machinery of the regular service or the National Guard will be placed at their service, and it is hoped the enrollment of the troops will take little time. The recruiting points will be New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, Pitts-

FRENCH MAKE ATTACK

Six Thousand Germans Captured in Drive.

General Nivelle's Troops Have Made Excellent Progress in Fighting in Champagne District and Have Penetrated Hindenburg Line, Cutting a Sallient of Four Miles in Laon Defences.

PARIS, May 8.—The French returned Saturday to the attack on the defences of Laon, and made excellent progress. They cut a sallient of four miles from the Hindenburg line, and on a front as large cleared the last German from the Craonne plateau, reaching the dominating heights beyond. During the week-end more than 6,100 German prisoners were counted, in addition to several heavy guns.

The French Sunday consolidated, and at points extended, the important gains made in Saturday's battle. They now hold the ridge of the Craonne plateau, over which the Chemin-des-Dames runs from Laffaux Mill, on the east, to a point slightly beyond Craonne, on the west, a distance of about eighteen miles. Throughout Saturday night and Sunday the German counter-attacks were frequent and violent. The fighting was especially severe at Laffaux Mill, to the north and south of which the French captured German points of support Sunday. The occupation of this position enables General Nivelle to deliver an enflading fire against the enemy's defences along the northern slope of the Chemin-des-Dames and the uplands north of the Ailette Valley.

The German losses were unusually high. "Men returning from the lines," says one of the correspondents on this front, "assert that the number of German dead lying on the battlefield is greater than ever seen on one spot during the fighting in France."

The official day report from Paris emphasizes the relation between the French and British operations as a single offensive. The purposes of the allied command is either to destroy the German army or force an expensive retreat which could hardly stop this side of the evacuation of western Belgium and northern France. To do this they must shatter or render untenable either one or both of the two piers of the Hindenburg line: Douai, before the British, and Laon, before the French.

Nivelle's victory was accomplished, however, only by breaking down a German defence stubborn beyond description. In fact, it may be doubted whether many days of more intense fighting ever have been seen. On the whole front of forty miles and more there was an incessant battle, in which French attack and German counter-attack alternated.

Against the French, as he has against the British, von Hindenburg threw in many fresh divisions. The French identified four new units on small sections of the front. Wherever a point in his line was threatened the German commander threw in reserves in fierce efforts to regain lost positions. It is authoritatively stated that the Germans counter-attacked Saturday more violently than at any time since the French offensive started.

Oats closed ½c higher for May and ¼c higher for July. Barley closed 2½c lower for May. Flax closed 1½c higher for May and 1½c higher for July.

There was not much cash trade. The machinery of the new agreement has not yet been quite perfected and there has not been anything like a full resumption of buying in the country. The agent of the allied governments bought wheat at the spreads, giving up the May, but, broadly speaking, there was little or no cash trade. There was a fair demand for the first two grades of oats, but lower grades were not wanted. It looks at the moment as if considerable tension was developing in May oats.

Hughes Again Premier.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 8.—Although the returns of the general election are incomplete, it seems certain that Premier Hughes will have a majority in both Houses. The majorities generally in the labor strongholds have been greatly reduced, and several prominent laborites have been defeated. Mr. Hughes has been returned in Bendigo with a majority of 3,600.

Hon. Frank Cook, the former Liberal leader, but now a member of the Hughes ministry, speaking at Sydney, declared that the nation had risen grandly and hung true to its traditions.

Brisbane reports that the latest figures available as a result of the referendum on the question of Queensland legislative council, give this result: For, 115,367; against, 157,194.

Stop Wastage of Food.

LONDON, May 8.—An order will be issued in the near future providing that the waste of any kind of food shall be a punishable offence. Captain Charles Bathurst, Parliamentary Secretary of the Food Controller's Department, made this announcement Monday in the House of Commons.

Hollweg Afraid to Reply.

LONDON, May 8.—According to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, the pan-German newspapers in Berlin continue their attacks on the German chancellor. The Neuste Reichsten accuses Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg of delaying his reply to the reichstag interpellations regarding Germany's war aims until after the Stockholm Socialistic conference.

Hun Extortion in Belgium.

HAVRE, May 8.—The Societe Generale, one of the largest Belgian banks, has been fined 500,000 marks by the German authorities. The fine was levied under the pretext that the bank was in correspondence with the Belgian Government.

Liberty Loan Growing.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Total subscriptions to the Liberty Loan of 1917, according to estimates made Monday night, amount to $336,851,000. This represents the results of three days' campaign.

Britain to Control Liquor.

LONDON, May 8.—The Times this morning claims it has authority for stating that the Government has adopted in principle the policy of state purchase of the liquor trade.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Friction in Austria.

LONDON, May 8.—Germany's troubles with Austria are increasing. According to Geneva reports, the German Empress went to Vienna to plead with the Emperor Charles to suppress the peace manifestations in Austria and prevent discussion of the idea of peace without annexation or indemnity.

Germany is getting fearful lest Austria make peace without taking Russian territory, inducing the Allies to compensate Austria by giving her territory in the Balkans.

Jealousy and distrust between Austria and Germany are growing more menacing. The German Empress was joined at Vienna by the Bavarian Prime Minister, who is reinforcing her efforts to induce Charles to stand loyally by Germany. Austria is like a powder magazine, and the royal family and Government are fearful of exerting pressure lest a revolution start. The public feels that Germany is preventing peace in order to save the ambitions of the Hohenzollerns, which, if gratified, would make Germany more powerful at the ultimate expense of Austria.

Prince Selects Bride.

LONDON, May 8.—Prince Edward Albert of Wales, heir-apparent to the British throne, has answered for himself the question whom he will marry, according to The National News, a London weekly. The News says the Prince has decided he will ask for the hand of his first cousin, Princess Maud, the youngest daughter of the Princess Royal and sister to Princess Arthur of Connaught. The young Princess is fourteen months older than the Prince, who is 22. She has lived a retired life, the inseparable companion of her mother. Her father, the Duke of Fife, was the closest personal friend of the late King Edward. The report of The National News contradicts the rumor current some time ago that the Prince sought the hand of Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy.

The Douglas Fir.

The flagstaff in Kew Gardens, London, is a Douglas fir which was shaped and creosoted in Vancouver. Poles of Douglas fir are highly valued for ships' masts and flagstaves because of their straightness, durability, strength, and resilience. The timber is also largely used for telegraph and electric-railway poles and bridge and trestle timbers. Douglas fir is regarded as perhaps the most important of American woods. Estimates of the available supply range from three hundred thousand million to three hundred and fifty thousand million feet, board measure. The tree is most abundant, and attains its largest size not far above sea level in southern British Columbia, and in the region between the coast of Washington and Oregon and the western foothills of the Cascade Mountains. There the trees, crowded close together, rise to a height of three hundred feet.

"Movies" in the Schools.

The sum of $1,000 was recently voted in Toronto for the purpose of securing moving-picture apparatus to be used in the schools for the demonstration of various subjects. It was pointed out that the "movies" could be used to illustrate mining in British Columbia, farming in the West, and lumbering in the north country. Production in various factories could also be shown. The machines will cost about $125 each, while each picture would cost about $500. The pictures could be used in different schools, the film being passed around from school to school.

ARTISTS AT THE FRONT

GIFTED MEN WHO ARE NOW WEARING KHAKI.

Painters, Cartoonists, and Illustrators Have Joined the Army and Are Serving in Various Military Capacities, Several Having Been Wounded While One Is Now Wearing a Military Cross.

THOSE who used to think that the artist's occupation cuts him off from military service have heard with interest from time to time of the activities of the Artists' Rifles in the Old Land. This corps was raised originally about sixty years ago by Lord Leighton, Robert Edis, and Val Prinsep exclusively for artists and sculptors, and at different periods men like Watts, Millais, Holman Hunt, William Morris, and Sir Edward Poynter have belonged to it. In time it was enlarged to include actors, architects, musicians, and writers, and with the coming of the Great War, the qualifications of the corps were made even more elastic. There is no organization in Canada that corresponds to the Artists' Rifles, and for that reason people in this country do not realize how many of our artists have put on khaki. We must bear in mind that among the younger men in the Dominion the number of artists is small, as that side of our national existence has only just begun to develop, but in comparison to its size, this fraternity is splendidly represented in the Canadian army.

James L. Graham was one Canadian artist who did belong for a short time to the United Arts Corps, of London, England. For three years prior to the outbreak of the war Mr. Graham had been living in Antwerp, saturating himself with the splendid tradition of Belgian art. During that time he kept in close touch with his native land, and frequently showed his pictures in our exhibitions. In July, 1914, Mr. Graham had the result of four years of study and hard work in his studio in Antwerp. Like other people of peaceful Belgium, he did not realize the meaning of the German avalanche until it was too late to save any of his pictures. When forced to escape with the other men who did not want to fall into the hands of the Teutons, he left many fine paintings behind him. Mr. Graham immediately enlisted with the United Arts Corps and remained with them until he returned to Canada last March. Three weeks after landing in the Dominion he joined the artillery, and is now in England with the prospect of being soon at the front, where he will do field sketching and signalling.

Two of Canada's best known painters have been wounded. One of them, Pte. A. Y. Jackson, is looked upon by many as the most conspicuous figure among our younger artists. Pte. Jackson came originally from Montreal, but after studying in the Julian Academy of Paris he settled down in Toronto. He quickly received recognition as a painter with plenty of ideas and marked originality. He showed himself to be unconventional in his work without running to extremes. So it was that he found himself classed among

to do a little etching since crossing to England, and with his devotion to his art and his faith in himself, he ought to succeed. Pte. Woods is a married man with a family.

A young Canadian artist, less widely known than those already mentioned, who has been doing an interesting work in France is Pte. J. W. McLaren, who paints in oils and water colors with a talent that promises well for the future. He went to England with a University Company and was drafted to the Princess Pats. He entered the trenches last March and saw three months of service there. Then his unique chance came. In June the major of the battalion asked him to get up an entertainment. The scheduled performance had to be postponed on account of severe fighting in which the regiment took part, but later on the "revue," as they called it, reached the stage, with such success that the Colonel suggested that it should become a regular feature of the army life. Pte. McLaren organized the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry Comedy Company with the assistance of Mr. Percy Ham, son of Dr. Albert Ham, as business manager. With a company of clever lads, including several professional actors, Pte. McLaren has staged plays, sketches, skits, and entertaining fragments that we would look for in winter garden shows or similar conglomerations of vaudeville. He has an orchestra of 22 men, so that there is plenty of music for his reviews.

Some of the other painters in khaki are R. S. Hewton of Lachine, Que., who has a picture in the National Gallery; Sergt. Charles Mailard, of Montreal, whose paintings, "Poilu" and "Notre Dame de Paris" are in the Canadian Royal Academy this year; Lieut. W. G. Storm, of Weston, Ont., who went to the front in the Imperial Army, and who has received the Military Cross; and Captain Louis Keene of Montreal, who has been to the front in France, and who is now connected with military undertakings in the Province of Quebec. Captain Keene is a clever painter of figures, and has a picture "To Fill the Gap" in a prominent place in this year's Academy.

Among the etchers are Lieut. Cyril H. Barraud, who crossed to France with the 43rd Battalion of Winnipeg; W. J. Chester, formerly a teacher in the Toronto Technical School and recently invalided from active service; Pte. A. E. Waite, of Toronto, whose sensitive delicate work is widely known; and Pte. W. R. Stark, of Toronto, who, in addition to being an excellent etcher of figures, has been successful in painting animals and landscapes. Pte. Waite is with the field ambulances and Pte. Stark with a construction battalion. Two cartoonists are wearing khaki, Henry B. Leahy, of Halifax, and E. Wallcouins. Three young men of promise who have also gone are Luigi Nobili, an Italian, who returned to his own country to fight against Austria; W. Smithson Broadhead, with the 1st King Edward Horse, who has a picture, "The Wayside Sketch," honored by a place on the walls of the Arts and Letters Club of Toronto, and Lieut. Gordon Payne, now with the Signallers in the Old Land.

Another Toronto man who has gone to England in connection with war work is Mr. F. Coates, who at one time made a hobby of staging small plays and fantasies presented by amateurs. Mr. Coates was inter-

A VALUABLE LANGUAGE

KNOWLEDGE OF SPANISH WOULD AID NATIONAL TRADE.

Now That the Study of German Has Grown Less Popular in Our Schools, Thoughtful Men Are Urging That the Language Which Would Open the Doors of South America to Us Should Be Taken Up.

"I HAVE been disgusted with the extravagant claims on behalf of the German language as a practical and cultural subject, which have so long been made in many of our educational institutions, and the disproportionate amount of time given to it when compared with other modern languages." Such was the pungent remark of Prof. Alfred Baker, of Toronto University, in the course of his address on "The Spanish Nations," recently given before the Empire Club of Canada, when he declared to a sympathetic audience that for the present, at least, the greater portion of time devoted to German would be much more wisely devoted to Spanish. Dr. Baker took the same high ground with regard to Spanish language and literature which it will be remembered he took with regard to French language and literature in his presidential address last year to the Royal Society of Canada. While not having upon the English-speaking people of Canada the same claims as French, Spanish has upon both English and French-speaking peoples urgent claims on economic grounds, and large claims on the ground of literature and art.

Although the parent country Spain is not as yet, Prof. Baker pointed out, the open ally of the Entente Powers, she is, in her Government and her people, on the whole friendly to them, but greatly hampered within her borders by the machinations of the Germans, whose universal policy of "peaceful penetration" has been stealthily pursued there both before the war and with increased vigor since its outbreak. Germany has the double purpose of keeping Spain from joining the Allies, and of exploiting her resources and markets for herself when peace comes. When the struggle ends, as it is sure to end in victory for the Allies, Spain will continue to be a field for Canadian enterprise and commerce, but owing to its remoteness only a very limited field, compared with the vast opportunities which Spanish-America affords.

To get a proper share of this potential trade, lying almost at our doors, it is of the first importance that our manufacturers and commercial travelers should have a good working knowledge of Spanish, both oral and written—the acquisition of which is by no means the formidable task that is generally imagined. As is well known, Great Britain, although in the throes of an unprecedented war, but with an eye to the future, is, by promoting and encouraging the study of Spanish in her schools and colleges, making ready to meet at least upon equal terms German competition in all Spanish-out running to extremes. So it was that he found himself classed among the progressive young painters without running foul of the critics who fear that the radicals are on the point of becoming eccentrics. It was typical of this clever young artist that he should have enlisted early in the war as a private in the 60th Battalion, raised in his native city of Montreal. He crossed to France early last year and was wounded in the spring push. Pte. Jackson did not put aside his brushes entirely when he enlisted, as the painting of "Mills at Leeds" in this year's Canadian Royal Academy testified. Pte. Jackson is an artist who understands how to put Canadian feeling into his pictures.

Captain Ernest Fosbery, of Ottawa, has also been wounded. Captain Fosbery is one of our best known landscape painters, and he also does an occasional portrait. His etchings have been seen in many exhibitions, and it is perhaps as an etcher that a great many art lovers know him best. He is a master of exquisite line. Ottawa has given the Dominion no more widely known artist than Capt. Fosbery in recent years, and his work will be greatly missed from the galleries so long as he continues to wield an officer's swagger stick instead of a paint brush. It was with the 77th Battalion that he entered active service.

One of the most marked individualities among the younger painters is Mr. Lawren Harris, now doing military work with the Headquarters Staff in Toronto. Canadian art has always suffered from the lack of young artists who are sufficiently independent financially to paint what they like. Mr. Harris is one of the lucky few who are not slaves to the public, but who can please themselves. It is certain that he will never get into a rut. At times he paints brilliantly; again he dumbfounds the critics; but he always displays originality and a determination to do just what pleases him. The general public first paid attention to his work when he painted studies of the old houses on Toronto's down-town streets that were once the homes of fashion, but have now fallen on evil days. These pictures were not only fine bits of color but they showed plenty of character. More recently Mr. Harris has been painting studies of hills and trees laden with snow. The general public does not like them so well as the old houses. They do not know what the artist is trying to do and why he should be doing it, but Mr. Harris continues on his way regardless of what the public wants. He has become a force in Canadian art.

A picturesque personality among the artists in khaki is Pte. W. J. Wood, of the 157th Battalion. Pte. Wood is a man with whom art has been his life's ambition, but he could only work very slowly towards his goal. He started out into the world very young and, in his own words, he has done "everything that a man can do with his hands." He has been a lumberman and a blacksmith, and when he went to Boston to get into touch with the art life there, he worked as a gardener. He lived as a boy in Ottawa, but in recent years his home has been in Midland. The reward of Pte. Wood's efforts was just commencing to come when war broke out. His etchings, crude but vigorous, were finding a place in the exhibitions, and some of them were to be seen last September at the Toronto Exhibition. He has continued small plays and fantasies presented by amateurs. Mr. Coates was interested in sculpture and designing, and he is now using his gift for modeling to aid in the restoration of the faces of men seriously wounded.

There are two women artists whose names must be added to this list. Miss Florence Carlyle, of Woodstock, is regarded by many of the critics as the most eminent of our women painters. She possesses an international reputation, her pictures having been shown and admired in New York, in the Paris Salon and the British Royal Academy. Miss Carlyle is working in an English munition factory. Miss Clara E. Hagarty, of Toronto, is also in London, where she has been laboring, ever since the outbreak of the war, in the parcel room of the Red Cross Society.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Gamey Case Recalled.

Only one or two of the chief actors in the celebrated Gamey case which is recalled by the recent death of the member for Manitoulin, are living to-day. Fourteen years have passed since the famous expose was made. Sir George Ross, the then Premier, and leader of the party against whom the charge of bribery was laid by the late Mr. Gamey, is dead. Sir James Whitney, leader of the party in whose interests Mr. Gamey was elected, has passed away. Chancellor Sir John Boyd, who sat with Sir Glenholm Falconbridge on the Royal Commission, that investigated Mr. Gamey's charges, died a few months ago. Hon. James R. Stratton, against whom the most serious allegations were made, passed away last year at Hot Springs. Mr. Stratton's private secretary, Elgin Meyers, who figured as a witness in the investigation, has been dead some years. Hon. S. H. Blake who prosecuted in the hearing before the Royal Commission on behalf of Mr. Gamey, also passed away some years ago. Hon. W. D. McPherson, now Provincial Secretary, assisted Mr. Blake. Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., had with him as associate counsel in conducting the case for the accused, the present Mr. Justice Riddell.

Military Badges.

The following memorandum was issued by the Minister of Militia:

"As a number of inquiries have appeared from time to time with reference to badges for discharged soldiers and men who have applied for service and been rejected for various reasons, in which it has been intimated that these badges were to be issued or sold by private organizations or concerns, it is considered desirable to point out that an order-in-Council has been prepared and will shortly be promulgated dealing with this whole subject. This order will provide for the free issue of official Government badges to all who are entitled to such by reason of being honorably discharged soldiers, or having been rejected for or exempted from service with the forces. The order will also provide that no persons other than those to whom badges have been duly issued shall wear any such badge, and it will be illegal to manufacture, sell, purchase or wear any other badges purporting to be for such purposes as provided for in the order-in-Council. Heavy penalties will be provided for infringements of the order."

to meet at least upon equal terms German competition in all Spanish-speaking countries. A well-known publisher is authority for the statement that in Great Britain the number of Spanish text-books sold the past year was three times greater than that of the preceding year. Chairs in Spanish have recently been established in the universities of London and Leeds. German is no longer studied to any considerable extent in British schools, partly because there are now no native German teachers available, but chiefly because of the antipathy to everything German.

In the line of Prof. Baker's plea for a larger and more general study of Spanish in our educational institutions, it should be borne in mind that our neighbors to the south of us are fully alive to the present value and potentialities of Spanish-American trade. To this end Spanish has been a popular study in colleges and secondary schools ever since the Spanish-American war. Since the days of James G. Blaine and even earlier, Pan-Americanism has been a great object of Washington policy, and for years the study there has been to increase United States trade in the markets of Latin, otherwise, Spanish, America. The European war, cutting off communications between Germany and South America, has disclosed to the United States new and vast commercial possibilities. The demand for a practical knowledge of the Spanish language has grown so rapidly that the schools are finding it difficult to cope with the situation. The University of Washington, with a staff of seven teachers—under a graduate of Toronto University, it is interesting to note—was forced to turn away 200 students from its Spanish classes in the fall of 1916, for lack of instructors. According to a pamphlet, published recently by Allyn and Bacon, in New York City alone more than 40,000 pupils are studying Spanish. In the DeWitt-Clinton High School there are 1,200, and in the Commercial High School, of Brooklyn, 2,000. At Harvard University there are 600 students in Spanish courses. At the University of Chicago the attendance in this language has increased threefold in eighteen months. The increase at the University of Michigan is typical: 1914, 110; 1915, 225; 1916, 450. Harvard University now accepts Spanish for matriculation, as do also the state authorities of New York.

What, it may again be asked, is Canada doing in the matter? Our Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa has published a Handbook for Export to South America (1915), in which attention is called to the opportunities for developing trade with South America. "Canada," the pamphlet observes, "has an exceptional opportunity to secure a footing in South American markets. There is a chance for her to gain a position that otherwise might take ten years to accomplish. . . . From the standpoint of commercial utility in relation to Canadian exports, next to English, Spanish easily stands first. One very important feature which should be kept clearly in view is, that it affords an entry to countries that produce raw material, but manufacture to only a small degree." Our Canadian universities, with the exception of the University of Toronto, have neglected Spanish. At our Provincial University the study of this language has suffered from unfortunate restrictions. One has been removed only recently,

A NATIONAL PROBLEM

INCREASED INTEREST IS SHOWN IN PRODUCTION OF FOOD.

During the Coming Summer People in Both Town and County Throughout the Dominion Will Help Forward the Big Movement to Increase Supply of Grain and Vegetables.

THE production of food, and the operation of the thousand and one activities before the food reaches the consumer, often thousands of miles away from the point of production, are matters of vast importance even in times of peace. War accentuates that importance, and, when in August, 1914, the long-dreaded European conflict broke forth, it was natural that the keenest attention should be directed to the supplies of grain, live stock, and live stock products in this and other countries immediately affected by the war. Unhappily, in respect to the great wheat-producing district of western Canada, the month war broke out was the month which, at the close of an exceptionally hot and dry summer, sealed the fate of the harvest, especially through south-western Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The wheat yield of the three western provinces in 1913 was 209,262,000 bushels; in 1914, 140,958,000 bushels. Assistance was imperative. War made it more imperative. An extraordinary situation justified extraordinary measures, and for the supply of necessary food and fodder, and for supplying seed grain on an unprecedented scale, the federal Government advanced the sum of $12,309,000.

The Department of Agriculture, in the winter and spring of 1915 carried out a wide campaign of "Patriotism and Production." As a result of the sentiment aroused, and of the fortunate climatic conditions, we witnessed happily the greatest harvest in the history of the western country—342,948,000 bushels. Another campaign of "Production and Thrift" was made in the winter and spring of 1916. A large staff of special speakers was employed, and the co-operation of the provinces readily secured. Unfortunately, the climatic conditions of 1916 were the reverse of favorable. An excess of moisture in many parts of the country, widespread outbreaks of rust, and other difficulties, resulted in a wheat crop in the three western provinces of approximately 199,900,000 bushels, and a shortage of most crops throughout the country, with the exception of hay.

Already the labor question, as related to production on the farms, was becoming acute, and the farmers, who had responded splendidly under the spur, not only of high prices, but of a fine patriotism, were faced with a situation more difficult than in the past. England, whose average crop of wheat is 61,000,000 bushels, and whose yearly import of wheat is approximately 210,000,000 bushels, could no longer look to Russia. Supplies from Australia and India, and even supplies from Canada and the United States were ren-doing excellent organizing work in that city, and in a recent letter from Mr. Haining, the director for Saskatchewan, he tells that the whole movement is receiving very enthusiastic support, and makes the interesting statement that the City of Saskatoon has undertaken to plough, harrow, and disc all vacant lots or back gardens for the sum of one dollar, thus giving a great impetus to the production of home vegetables.

The situation facing the Empire is undoubtedly a cause for anxiety. Nevertheless, it is being met with courage and resource, and Canada will do her part well.

SOLDIER GETS POSTOFFICE.

Corp. Ernest A. V. Carr Lost Both Legs at St. Eloi.

Corp. Ernest A. V. Carr has been recommended by Mr. W. B. Northrup, M. P. for East Hastings, to fill the vacant postmastership at Corbyville. Corporal Carr is a Belleville boy, who until a few days ago was an inmate of the Military Hospital in Toronto. He is at the present time on two months' leave of absence, but before taking over his duties with the Government he will return to the hospital in Toronto for treatment. Corporal Carr lost both legs while fighting with the Canadians in the salient at St. Eloi, and he has to be taken around in an invalid's chair.

The plucky young corporal, who is only 24 years of age, had a narrow escape from death when the high explosive landed in his immediate vicinity. Both legs were so badly crushed and splintered that the next day, June 10th, 1916, amputation was considered necessary. The corporal's system was shattered by the shock. When he returned to Canada young Carr brought back with him to Mrs. G. N. Barnett, of Belleville, a mud-bespattered flag belonging to her son, who was killed in action on the salient.

Corporal Carr has the distinction of having signed on for active service four days after the declaration of war. On August 8, 1914, he offered himself for service, and proceeded to Valcartier, whence he crossed to England and eventually to Salisbury as a member of the 2nd Battalion. With this unit he took the field early in 1915, and for more than a year held down a portion of the line in the salient where the Canadians suffered so severely. On being wounded on June 9th, 1916, he was removed to the General Hospital at Boulogne, and the next six months he spent in hospitals and convalescent homes at Northampton, Dunston, Peterboro, and Shorncliffe, being then returned to Canada, and landing in Quebec on February 22.

Prior to enlisting Carr was employed as a railway fireman. He also served for a time in the militia as a member of a battery of artillery.

The Country's Finances.

Near approach of the end of the fiscal year finds Canada's financial position sound. The Customs revenue, which may be regarded as a fairly reliable barometer of trade conditions throughout the country, continues to break records. The figures for February showed an increase of more than ten per cent. over the corresponding figures for 1916: and there is reason to expect

"I DON'T SUFFER ANY MORE"

"Feel Like a New Person," says Mrs. Hamilton.

New Castle, Ind.—"From the time I was eleven years old until I was seventeen I suffered each month so I had to be in bed. I had headache, backache and such pains I would cramp double every month. I did not know what it was to be easy a minute. My health was all run down and the doctors did not do me any good. A neighbor told my mother about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it, and now I feel like a new person. I don't suffer any more and I am regular every month."—Mrs. HAZEL HAMILTON, 822 South 15th St.

When a remedy has lived for forty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their health to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

COMPLIMENTED BY GERMAN.

Soldier Who Tried to Escape Had Unique Experience.

Recently emerged from hospital, where he has been since reaching London as an exchanged prisoner from Germany, Private A. L. P. Law of the 4th C. M. R., and son of Commander F. C. Law, R.N., Toronto, is now looking forward to returning to Canada. For four months after the heavy action of June last around Ypres he was "missing," and after some weeks had elapsed, his relatives were mourning for him. Ultimately the Canadian Red Cross succeeded in tracing him and were able to report that he was in a prison camp near Hanover. When Pte. Law crossed to France he was transport sergeant, but at his own request he reverted and took a course in bombing and joined the battalion scouts. This is at all times exceedingly risky work, and he was generally to the fore on occasions which demanded courage. In the battle of 2nd June last, he was wounded in the right leg, and also sustained several shrapnel wounds elsewhere. While lying in this condition unconscious he was struck by a shell which tore away the left-hand pocket from his serge, which further incapacitated his arm. Some days later he was picked up by a German patrol, who showed more humanity than the

of Education in B. C.

Enrolment in all the college schools of British Columbia was 64,570, according to a report of the Superintendent of Education just compiled for the Provincial Government. The report shows that the cost for education proper was $999,99, added to which were outlays of $138,322.44 for the purchase of equipment of works for the building of new schoolhouses, repairs, etc., the aggregate cost of education having been $1,138,322.44. But the cost of education is considerably greater than is taken of the expenses by incorporated cities, municipalities, and other districts which added a total of $927,53, making the

Premier of Montreal.

Three days ago the Privy Council issued a letter from London, addressed to "The Premier of Ottawa, Quebec." It was signed by Sir Robert Borden.
 The letter was received by a Cabinet Minister who is about twenty-five years.

Russia. Supplies from Australia and India, and even supplies from Canada and the United States, were rendered more difficult and more costly by shortage of transportation and by the submarine menace. Munitions were vital; foodstuffs vital. Restriction of unessential imports was bound to come. In face of the conditions touched on above, it seemed clear that Canada should not only increase her productive efforts and direct them along the right lines, but should also enlist all available forces in the task.

For this reason a Government appeal was issued two weeks ago for citizens not only in the rural, but in the urban communities. It was followed by a personal letter to the mayor of every town and city in Canada, setting the situation forth at some length, and inviting co-operation.
 Every provincial Minister of Agriculture was also written to, the Directors of National Service, and others, and from the replies it is abundantly evident that a strong and healthy sentiment exists all through the country, and that already much excellent work had been done.

In regard to the appeal to the people in cities and towns for the utilization of vacant lots and gardens in productive work, it is obvious that vegetables, including potatoes, would be chiefly grown. Potatoes are not a perfect food, having a heavy water content, and are too bulky to be a very desirable form of export to Great Britain. Nevertheless, their food value is considerable, and their production and use on a large scale this year would assist in the releasing of other more compact and highly nutritious foods which it might be vitally necessary to get to England. Much has been said about the potato situation at the present time, and it might be well to put on record some facts relating to this food product:

In Canada, for the ten fiscal years from 1907 to 1916:

	Bushels.
Average production . . . . .	70,000,000
Average yearly imports . . . . .	355,000
Average exports . . . . .	1,130,000
Yearly excess of exports over imports . . . . .	775,000
(Or practically one per cent of the whole crop.)

For the past season the crop has been estimated at about 60,000,000 bushels. The countries to which we export most heavily are, first, Cuba, where a valuable trade has been built up; then the United States; then Newfoundland, West Indies, and so on. Pains have been taken to ascertain the amount of supplies in the country at the present time.
 For obvious reasons, it is not easy to get very accurate figures, but, from official and commercial information gathered from a large number of sources, the present supplies, over and above the estimated requirements for food and seed, are between two millions and two and one half million bushels.

It is most encouraging to know of the widespread interest aroused in the towns and cities in this whole question of production. Provincial and municipal authorities, and local organizations of all kinds are actively engaged in the work. The Directors of National Service are devoting unstinted efforts in the same cause, and are paying special attention to the enlistment of all available labor and energies. Mr. Sherrard, the director for the Montreal district, is crease of more than ten per cent over the corresponding figures for 1916; and there is reason to expect that equally satisfactory advances will be shown in March.

This is satisfactory in a double sense: it shows that despite the war the country's prosperity continues on the upgrade, and it acts as an incentive to the nation to lift that prosperity to a still higher level.

During the past two and a half years the nation's energies have been chiefly devoted to the war, and rightly so, because the whole future of the Dominion and the Empire depends upon the success of the vast issue in Europe. But it is nevertheless important, if not vital, that the commercial and industrial activities of the country be maintained and extended in every possible way, if only to bring about a condition whereby the Dominion will be in a stronger position to meet the heavy burdens that will necessarily be imposed upon it as a result of the war.

And, in addition to that important aspect, there is the future development of the country to be borne in mind. After the war there will be an unloosening of the national energies now concentrated upon a temporary but vital enterprise. The great armies now battling in Europe will be forged into industrial armies and concentrated upon the task of regenerating the devastated industrialism of most of the nations now dedicated to war. There will have to be great reorganizations, and there will necessarily be great upheavals, and it would be folly on the part of Canada, if, while expending her energies now upon the supreme issue in Europe, she did not, at the same time, make some preparation to maintain for herself after the coming of peace, the splendid position she has so dearly won in this war.

Needs No Excuse.

It is natural, when one studies the situation, that the farmers of the country should now be buying half the automobiles that are on the market. Aside from the fact that the farmer has had a year of exceptional prosperity and that the distances he travels make some vehicle an economic necessity, he is in a better position to keep an auto at a minimum expense than is the city man. In the first place, he is likely to be something of a machinist and will do a good deal of his own repair work, being forced by his distance from town to rely on his own resources.
 Then he is likely to have a barn or a shed already built, and will be put to no expense for the building or rent of a garage. Almost every time he goes anywhere he saves time that is an asset in his business. If he is wise, possession of the auto enables him to reduce the number of his horses sufficiently to pay for the gasoline he consumes. The city man has no such offsets, and unless he uses the auto in his business he must

400 Students to Serve.

Two hundred and fifty students of women's colleges of the University of Toronto have expressed their willingness to enter employment upon fruit farms of Ontario as fruit pickers during the coming summer. Women students of Queen's University to the number of probably one hundred will also volunteer, as well as the girls of MacDonald Hall, Guelph, making a total of probably 400 available. They all sign up for five months' employment.

his arm. Some days later he was picked up by a German patrol, who showed more humanity than the Boche is generally credited with, as he supplied him with water under hot fire and later removed him to a casualty clearing station.

Pte. Law had not much to complain of in camp, though he suffered the usual shortage of food. He found, however, that the Canadians were respected in camp on account of their exploits and dauntlessness, and one of his comrades, McGregor of Toronto, was actually complimented by the commandant for his pluck in twice attempting to escape. Pte.
 Law thinks that the surgeons treated his leg so "scientifically" as to render it quite certain that he would never again be a combatant. His family has five members in His Majesty's forces: one, Lieut.-Commander Law, was in a ship which was sunk last summer, though he himself survived; Major A. A. Law, invalided from France by trench fever, is attached to headquarters in London, and others are still on service.

Death of Sam Bittle.

Sam Bittle, well known throughout Canada and one of the pluckiest men who ever donned a glove in the prize ring, died recently.

Early in May, 1886, a report was circulated that there would be a prize fight on Harsen's Island, in the Detroit River, between two youngsters. One, Harry Gilmore, of Toronto, was 28 years old, and his ability was well known. The other was a young machinist from Guelph, Sam Bittle, 21 years old. As they were about to step into the ring it was discovered that the skin-tight gloves had been forgotten. This did not stop the fight.

Gilmore was favorite. He had never been defeated. At the first blow he broke Bittle's nose. Round after round the fight continued, Gilmore's face unmarked. An hour elapsed and Bittle was still sending powerful blows to his opponent's body, yet the spectators reckoned it a matter of time. Twenty rounds were fought and the two were still strong. Forty more minutes elapsed, and then came the twenty-sixth round.

Bittle's second saw that the crisis had arrived and told his principal to do his best, now or never. This was a most furious round. Bittle rushed his man, throwing right and left with great force. He forced Gilmore out of his corner and around, striking him fiercely. He continued the same tactics toward his own corner, and as Gilmore turned to one side, struck him a tremendous blow directly over the heart. The next moment he made a clean land on the neck, but the heart blow was the settler.
 Gilmore fell on his side, made a feeble effort to rise, then fell back, and the fight was over. For this hour and forty minutes' work Bittle received $1,700. After the fight he and Gilmore were taken to Canada to avoid arrest.

Returning to Detroit twenty years ago, Bittle embarked in business.
 Three years ago, with his savings invested in real estate, he retired.

TOWN COUNCIL

Council Chamber,
May 7th, 1917.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Reeve Graham presiding.

Present—Councillors Steacy, Lowry, Hunter, Gibbard and Robinson.

Reeve Graham brought up the question of the town securing a car load of seed potatoes in order that the farmers in this vicinity might be able to procure more readily all the potatoes they may require for seed. G.
B. Curran had informed him that the Ontario Department of Agriculture had a car load of seed potatoes, which they would let Napanee have,
and they could be shipped so as to arrive here the first of next week.

The cost per bag would be about $4.25, or possibly a fraction more, but at any rate they would be sold out at actual cost.

A Committee composed of Reeve Graham, and Councillors Robinson and Gibbard were appointed and given power to act in the matter.

Council adjourned until Tuesday afternoon, at 4.30 p.m.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

Council met as per adjournment on Wednesday afternoon.

Members present—Reeve Graham, and Councillors Gibbard, Lowry, Robinson and Steacy.

The minutes of the two previous meetings were read and confirmed.

The Clerk read a notice from the Canadian Northern Railway asking for approval of the new location of the C.N. Ry. Station. Mr. J. E. Robinson read a letter prepared by the Committee to the Railway Commission advising the Commission that in view of the proposed nationalization of the G.T.R. and C.N. Railways, that the matter of a new station be left in abeyance until the policy of the Government in the matter is disclosed and that as far as Napanee is concerned the station should remain where it is.

Mr. J. E. Madden notified the Council on behalf of Mrs. Leah Russel, that action must be taken in regard to West street sewer. Mrs. Russel claims $500 damaged to her property.

Communication placed in hands of Reeve, Chairman of Finance, and Solicitor with power to act.

Council adjourned until Wednesday,

WEDNESDAY EVENING

Council met as per adjournment, Reeve Graham in the chair.

Present—Councillors Lowry, Spencer, Gibbard, Robinson, Hunter.

A communication was read from W.
J. Paul, M.P., in reference to the train service over the C. N. Railway.
He is advised that on May 20th the C.N.R. is putting on a train service leaving Trenton at 7.30 in the morning, arriving at Yarker at 9.00 a.m., and returning leave Yarker at 9.30 a.m., arriving at Trenton at 1.30 p.m.
Operating officials say this service will permit a passenger from Tweed or Tamworth arriving at Yarker at 9 o'clock to go to Napanee or Deserons to arriving there about 10.30 a.m., and leaving there again at 2.38 that afternoon and getting home the same evening.

Through the "U. E. Loyalist", I.O.D.E.

The Committee is much indebted to Mrs. Thos. Herrington, of the village road, for the donation of a centre piece, or verandah table of unbleached linen, embroidered silk in several colors, with a border of crochet most beautiful. Tickets on the same are now disposed of for the benefit of the work. Anyone wishing to help this work may obtain tickets from Mrs. Egerton VanLoven, in charge of the centre-piece, or various ladies who are visiting.

We desire herewith to express sincere thanks and appreciation to Mrs. Herrington for her generous contribution.

Another indication of appreciation for the work we are doing here to us from a friend and well-known resident of Napanee, a woman known to many of our town in a very handsome donation of hospital materials from Miss N. son. We wish to assure Miss of our deep sense of gratitude for her generous kindness, and her contribution to our supplies.

Those who prefer sewing to crocheting can help us in these two lines by making home garments to be made by crocheting the red ties for convalescent soldiers in the directions for which will be given at our work-room in the shaw block. The room is open Thursday and Saturday, when glad to welcome all our friends those who wish to assist us in work that is urgently required.

N.B.—The table centre above referred to is on exhibition in the room of Mr. A. E. Paul's Bookstore.

CLIP THIS AND PIN ON WIFE'S DRESSER

Cincinnati man tells how to shrivel up corns or calluses so they lift off with fingers.

Ouch ! ! ! ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you.

Y. M. C. A. MILITARY SERVICE DEPARTMENT

NAPANEE WILL "SERVE BY GIVING"

These awful days bring great opportunities to every loyal Canadian and we are glad to meet them cheerfully and generously.

We cannot all go to the front, but those of us who remain at home want to do all in our power to help make the boys, who are doing "our fighting", as comfortable and happy as possible.

The Y.M.C.A. is doing a wonderful work—Every Government and Militant Officer endorses it—and the returned soldiers from this and all sections of the Country are full of praise for it.

The Y.M.C.A. has 50 branches in France, ranging in size from large structures accommodating 2,000 men at one table, to small dug-outs in the Front Line Trenches.

The Y.M.C.A. provides moving picture shows, Concerts, Athletic and Indoor Games, Gramophones, Libraries and magazines, and many other amusements, and also looks after the religious interests of the men by means of Sing Songs and Special Service (which are conducted by all Denominations).

Many a letter is written home, that would not have been sent—could not indeed—if the Y.M.C.A. were not supplying the materials.

This costs money—This year's expenses will total $750,000. All Canada is contributing—The people of Bowmanville just gave $2,000. Whitby $2,500, and now Napanee is asked to contribute its share.

WE ARE ASKING FOR $1,500, and if we all "do our bit" we'll easily make it.

FLORIDA GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Walker entertained Tuesday, May the first, from two to five, at their home in Florida, to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary. Mrs. Hiram Walker was formerly Miss Elizabeth Phillips, of Wilton, daughter of the late William Phillips. Mr. Walker has been a life-long resident of Florida, and resides on the same farm where he took his young bride fifty years ago.

The invitations issued numbered about fifty, but owing to the unfavorable conditions of the weather some of the guests from a distance were unable to attend. Among those present of their family was their only daughter, Mrs. Elgin Gilmore, and her three daughters, namely, Mrs. Harvey Roumey and the Misses Daisy and Violet Baker, all of Windsor. Mrs. Clifton Young, formerly Mary Walker, niece of the bride and groom, was able to celebrate her twelfth wedding anniversary with her aunt and uncle.

The house was tastefully decorated with cut flowers in the appropriate colors of yellow and white. The table was arranged to accommodate the bridal party. The centre of the table was decorated with a three-storey wedding cake, which also carried out the color scheme. A buffet lunch was served by the three granddaughters and Miss Wemp from four to five o'clock.

After lunch the guests assembled in the dining-room, where the congratulations were paid to Mr. and Mrs. Walker by Miss Wemp on behalf of those present.

Telegrams of congratulation were received from their two sons in Calgary, who were unable to be present, and also letters from friends who joined in wishing them many happy returns of their marriage anniversary. An enjoyable afternoon was spent by all, and before departing all joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

BAN FIES AND PASTRY.

League to Save Food—One Man Makes Vow Against Pies.

Pies and pastry must go! Excessive eating must be fought and finished just as excessive drinking has been disposed of.

That was the decision of a meeting held in St. Stephen's Church parish house last night, when a league was launched to boost a movement for voluntary rationing in Canada. Mr. C. A. C. Jennings, editor-in-chief of the Mail and Empire, predicted that a food dictator would be appointed for Canada, not only to conserve food, but to regulate prices.

"I'll start from to-night and I am not going to touch pie or cake while the war lasts," was the emphatic vow of Mr. J. E. Wainwright, of 621 Crawford street. "I do this to conserve food for our troops at the front and for those who will go hungry next year."

Mr. Dudley Hill, 699 Spadina Ave., of the Dominion Bank, pictured the waste in the average city kitchen.

"Waste!" exclaimed Mr. Hill, "there is almost as much food thrown away as eaten. Further, we waste wheat when we transform it into pies and cakes—let us use wheat only in its simplest form. We waste sugar, which in England can be bought now only by the pound, when we use it for candies at two and three dollars a pound. (Applause.) We waste milk when we use it for making ice cream, rather than cheese and butter, which are solely needed, but are scarce and have risen to almost prohibitive prices. And, lastly, we waste food by eating too much." Cries of "That's right."

"Excessive drinking has been fought, and fought to a finish, but I've never yet heard of a campaign against excessive eating. Now's the time to start it."

"Money isn't going to buy food next year, for there won't be food to buy. You can wear last year's clothes, but you can't eat yesterday's dinner."—Toronto Star, May 8th.

READING HISTORY.

The One Way to Acquire a Real Knowledge of the World.

Henry James once told me that the only reading of which he never tired was history. "The least significant footnote of history," he said, "stirs me more than the most thrilling and passionate fiction. Nothing that has ever happened to the world finds me indifferent."

I used to think that ignorance of history meant only a lack of cultivation and a loss of pleasure. Now I am sure that such ignorance impairs our judgment by impairing our understanding, by depriving us of standards, of the power to contrast and the right to estimate. We can know nothing of any nation unless we know its history, and we can know nothing of the history of any nation unless we know something of the history of all nations.

The book of the world is full of knowledge we need to acquire, of lessons we need to learn, of wisdom we need to assimilate. Consider only this brief sentence of Polybius, quoted by Plutarch, "In Carthage no one is blamed however he may have gained his wealth." A pleasant place, no doubt, for business enterprise, a place where young men were taught how to get on and extravagance kept pace with shrewd finance; a self satisfied, self confident, money getting, money loving people, honoring success and hugging its fancied security, while in faroff Rome Cato pronounced its doom.—Agnes Repplier in Atlantic Monthly.

GOOD AND BAD MANNERS.

And the Brand Used In the Privacy of the Home Circle.

There are three sorts of manners—good, bad and the sort that are used in the privacy of the home circle. The last named sort are usually the worst.

Good manners seldom come naturally to any male. This is proved by the fact that they must generally be hammered into small boys with a large, robust cane, the flat of the hand or the rear side of a hairbrush. As the boy grows to manhood he displays his native bad manners by telling his wife what he'd like to say to the tiresome folk who come to call and the people who give parties which he is expected to attend. His early training, however, prevents him from exhibiting his bad manners in public. Occasionally a male child is blessed with good manners from birth, but he usually expires with exceptional thoroughness shortly before or immediately after his fifth birthday.

Men with bad manners are generally very successful in life because their competitors and opponents lose their tempers, thus making it easy for the persons with the bad manners to defeat them. Before a bad mannered person becomes wealthy he is known as a selfish boor. Afterward he is said to be eccentric.

There is grave danger that while a bad mannered person is still in the boor class some strong minded and strong muscled individual may resent his bad manners and spread his features hither and yon over his face with a few brisk and well directed blows of a pair of No. 11 fists. If one cares to run the risk, bad manners are great things on which to gamble.—Kenneth L. Roberts in Life.

HIS SMUGGLING TRICK.

A Mexican Trader's Way of Evading the Customs Inspectors.

There are ways of evading duty down on the Rio Grande impossible to the port of New York. The Mexican found a way. He was a merchant just on the other side of the Mexican border. He had two vases which had caught the fancy of an American customer, but they were dear, and with

NOW ABOUT POTATOES

Grow Some and Keep Down the High Prices.

TOMATOES ALSO A GOOD LINE

But All Danger of Frosts Should Be Passed Before Tender Crops Are Put in the Ground.

(By S. C. JOHNSTON, Vegetable Specialist, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Some of our vegetables are very tender and should not be planted until after all danger of frost is over.
It must be remembered that because the soil is ready to receive the plants it is not absolutely necessary that the grower should set the plants out.
Potatoes planted out between 24th May and even the first of June will give excellent results. Tomatoes may be set out after the 6th of June and good returns expected, as some seasons a severe frost destroys many tomato plants as late as June 6th.
Vine crops such as cucumber and squash may be planted after all danger of frost is over.

POTATOES. Potatoes are one crop which may be planted on land which is considered to be in a very rough condition. Possibly there is no better crop to be planted on land which has been in sod for a number of years. Medium-sized tubers of good quality should be secured and they should be cut so that there are at least two eyes in each piece or set.
It is a good plan in a small garden to have the soil prepared fairly well, then cut the seed and commence planting. Furrows may be made with the hoe about six inches deep and two feet apart. The sets may be placed twelve inches apart in the bottom of the furrow and should be covered with two inches of soil. This will leave the young plant more or less in a trench. As the plants grow the soil will be gradually dragged up and the trench will be filled.
It will be necessary to cultivate the soil between the rows so as to keep down weeds, and at the same time soil should be gradually drawn up to the tops in sufficient quantities so that the growing roots will not be exposed to the sunlight, which will cause them to turn green and be of inferior quality. If an early variety has been planted and a vigorous growth has resulted it is possible that some may be fit to dig in August.
By removing some of the soil from around a hill with the hand one can tell whether they are fit to dig. If the potatoes are grown for winter use they do not need to be dug until quite late in the fall. The tops will die down at the first frost, but it is not absolutely necessary that they be dug immediately. They should, however, be dug before there is any severe frost.

TOMATOES. The tomato is one of the most popular vegetables either fresh or in a preserved condition. It may be grown quite easily in the backyard. The better practice with tomatoes is to purchase the plants ready for transplanting rather than attempting to grow these plants if one has not had experience in handling a hot-bed. Plants having a large root system are best, and the stock in any case should at least be the size of a lead pencil. The soil caught the fancy of an American customer, but they were dear, and with the duty added—not to be thought of. The customer told the Mexican so. The Mexican fell $5. But the price was still too dear. The Mexican fell again. But still there was the duty staring the customer in the face. Then suddenly, without explaining how, the Mexican guaranteed that the vases should be delivered free of duty on the other side of the Rio Grande—next morning at breakfast time.

"And," the Mexican add in a characteristic manner, "I will be there to collect."

At breakfast next morning, as the customer was eating leisurely, the Mexican appeared.

"Where are the vases?" the customer inquired.

"In the next room, senior," replied the Mexican, smiling blandly.

"And the duty?"

"There is no duty, senior."

"How in thunder did you manage it?" asked the American, amazed.

"I paid a greaser a dollar, senior. With the vases strapped to his back, he swam the Rio Grande. See, senior"—hurrying to bring in a vase from the next room and touching it gently with his fingers—"they are whole, per-fect."

Courtesy and Work.

When I want to find fault with my men I say nothing when I go through their departments. If I were satisfied I would praise them. My silence hurts them more than anything else in the world, and it doesn't give offense. It makes them think and work harder.

Many men fail because they do not see the importance of being kind and courteous to the men under them. Kindness to everybody always pays for itself. And, besides, it is a pleasure to be kind. I have seen men lose important positions, or their reputations—which are more important than any position—by little careless discourtesies to men whom they did not think it was worth while to be kind to.—Charles M. ## OUR OTTAWA LETTER

Corridor gossip occupied itself with strange matters these days. No doubt much of it is wild speculation but, on the other hand, there is no doubt that the wildest speculation has a substratum of fact. Most of the gossip is based on hints which have appeared from time to time in the Tory press as to what the Borden Government might do if the Opposition squeezed it to hard.

One of the threats is reconstructed government. Reconstructions are always great sport for the reconstructors and this one is no exception to the rule. Every reconstruction that fancy can suggest has been put forward by the cabinet makers during the last two weeks. Most of the re-constructions let Premier Borden out.

Sir Robert is to become Canadian law lord on the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council—that is to say, the cabinet makers have picked out that job for him. Some of the more liberal-minded Conservatives pointed if this off-again-on-again habit of the Conservative majority in the Red Chamber is to be overcome.

The Hon. Mr. Burrell is willing to quit, too. All he wants is to be postmaster at Ottawa. He likes the society here, the golfing and the tango teas, and would trade ambition for a pleasant life almost any day.
Rumor does not say who would take his place from British Columbia—perhaps Mr. Green, who is known to fame as the man who looks like Sir William Mackenzie. The cabinet reconstructors also intimate that Mr.
Crothers would make a good High Court Judge and that a real labor man as Minister of Labor would do better work in that department and inspire greater confidence in the masses than a corporation lawyer.

But if Premier Borden drops out, who? Well, the wise one says Sir Thomas White, with perhaps Mr. J.
W. Flavell, his fidus Achates, as Minister of Finance. Can you beat it? Imagine how the high cost of living would moan with Mr. Flavell arranging the tariff! The Nationalist alliance is to be maintained. Not only maintained but strengthened.

and whose votes the Borden Government has now discovered cannot be taken, because three-quarters of them would be cast against the Government of a thousand scandals. This measure, so the gossips say, will be put through, if necessary, under closure.

This story is hardly worth crediting, because any such measure of disfranchisement would wipe out what little there is left of the Conservative party in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan. It is only mentioned here to show what sad, bad, mad thoughts get into the heads of people when they are staring defeat in the face.

Gossip revolves about a third matter—extension. Will the Government accept the counsel of some of its more pig-headed advisors and try, in defiance of the British North America Act., custom, precedent, good taste and common decency, to extend its own life by making use of its majority of forty-seven in the House of Commons and its present majority of one in the Senate, or will it take its medicine at a general election? The latter, I think. A Government cannot ed out that job for him. Some of the more liberal-minded Conservatives say that Sir Robert put his foot in it in his Manchester speech, in which he outlined a sort of preferential trade among the Entente Allies—in short, the programme drafted at the trade conference in Paris. The chief trouble with this is that the United States has since come into the war as an ally, and no readjustment could contemplate keeping Uncle Sam out.

Another statesman who is booked by the rumor-mongers for retirement is the Hon. Bob. Rogers—that is to say, if he will let himself be retired.
As he is said to have the Federal campaign fund in his own name he may take a lot of convincing. There is a brisk division of opinion in the party in regard to the Hon. Bob's possible withdrawal from the affairs of the Government. Some say that if Bob goes he takes all the "pep" with him. Others say that if he goes a heavy load goes.

Meanwhile Bob's own party newspapers refrain from defending him, and his name is not put forward in the campaign literature. Strangely enough the person who is mentioned as his successor in the affections of the West is Arthur Meighen, at present Solicitor-General. One would think that Arthur would be about as popular in the west as a dozen lemons, but there's no accounting for tastes. The Hon. Bob is by way of being real folks, but Arthur is a knife-edge.

In fact, Arthur lets the hair-splitting habit run away with him. His latest feat of overplaying a fine point was when he argued that the Government couldn't get out of its Ross lifle contract when, at the very same time, Sir Charles Ross was protesting that he didn't want to stick to any contract that was not beneficial to the Empire. Such is Arthur Meighen, who is booked by the cabinet reconstructors to fill Bob's shoes in the West. Arthur is to become Minister of Justice, vice Doherty resigned—R. B. Bennett being slated for Solicitor General. The Hon. Bob is to be High Commissioner at London, if he will take it. It is felt that he could do work over there, handling the ballots which are now stacked up in the High Commissioner's office against the day the British Government will permit a Canadian general election at the battle front. If an election distracts the attention of the fighting man from his real job it might be possible to mark the ballots in London, and save the soldiers the trouble.

Rumor has also picked out the Hon.
Frank Cochrane for the seclusion of private life. The Hon. Frank is no addition to the debating strength of the Government—in fact he is as dumb as an oyster—and the party is kicking because this office Napoleon has no gift of eloquence. With a thing as hard as his connection with the Nickel Trust to explain it is felt that Mr. Cochrane ought to cut loose and explain or get out. Sir Harry Drayton, chairman of the Railway Commission, is said to be the party choice for the portfolio of Railways and Canals.

It is said that Dr. Roche would be willing to quit if he could get a place in the Senate, and he will probably get his wish, because the Conservative majority of two in the Senate is just now very precarious.
Only last week two Conservative senators died and the majority disappeared. More senators must be ap-ist alliance is to be maintained. Not only maintained but strengthened.

The Government believes that it has a prodigy in young Mr. Seigny—an infant phenomenon not second even to Vincent Crummies.

Another sory, which shows how desperately the wind blows for the Borden Government, is to the effect that alien enemies in Canada who cannot read or write are to be denaturalized and deprived of their votes. This is to be an offset against the four hundred thousand brave men who are overseas fighting for our freedom,

medicine at a general election? The latter, I think. A Government cannot prolong its own life indefinitely.
Sooner or later it has to get back democratic principles—the people have got to vote. Even in Great Britain the latest extension takes the Government only to November. The Borden Government has an extension which is valid until October. Some of its best friends are saying that that ought to be long enough. Its pro-fitting friends will have got all there is out of the war by that time.
Why, then, linger superfluous?

"Shucks, mother! The boys at the national guard encampment down to Galesburg fair last year made a better showing than this." He pursed out his lips and regarded a passing battalion with a critical eye.

The patriot stopped short in his review of the continent's delinquencies to wave his hat at Lady Crandall and Jane Gerson, who were trundling down under the avenue of planes in a smart dogcart. Lady Crandall answered his hail with a flourish of her whip, turned her horse off the road and brought her conveyance to a stop by the group of exiles. Hearty greetings passed around. The governor's wife showed her unaffected pleasure at the meeting.

"I thought you wouldn't miss the parade," she called down from her high seat. "Only thing that moves on this Rock—these daily reviews. Brought Miss Gerson down here so when she gets back to New York she can say she's seen the defenders of Gibraltar, if not in action at least doing their hard training for it."

"Well, I don't mind tellin' you," Sherman began defiantly. "I think the national guard of Illinois can run circles around these Englishmen when it comes to puttin' up a show. Now, Kitty, don't you try to drive a plug in your dad's sentiments again. Mrs. Crandall's all right—one of us." A shocked look from his daughter. "Oh, there I go again, forgettin'. Lady Crandall, I mean. Excuse me, ma'am."

"Don't you dare apologize," the governor's wife playfully threatened Mr. Sherman with her whip. "I love the sound of good, old fashioned 'Mrs.' Just imagine—married five years and nobody has called me 'Mrs. Crandall' until you did just now! 'Wedded, but Not a Mrs.' Wouldn't that be a perfectly gorgeous title for a Laura Jean novel? Miss Gerson, let's hop out and join these home folks. They're my kind."

The burst of laughter that greeted Lady Crandall's sally was not over before she had leaped nimbly from her high perch, Henry J. gallantly assisting. Jane followed, and the coachman from his little bob seat in the back drove the dog cart over the road to wait his mistress' pleasure. The scattered silver case. "With Almer's compliments to Captain Woodhouse, who forgot it when he gave up his room today. I've promised to turn it over to the captain and save the hotel man a lot of trouble and red tape getting a messenger through to the captain's quarters."

"By Jove!" Kimball's tired eyes lighted up with a quick flash of smoker's yearning. "A life saver! Came away from my room without my pet Egyptians—Mr. Sherman yelling at me to hurry or we'd miss this slow show and all that. I'm going to play the panhandler and beg one of your captain friend's smokes. He must be a good sort or you wouldn't be doing little favors for him, Miss Gerson. Come, now; in your capacity as temporary executrix will you invest one of the captain's cigarettes in a demand of real charity?"

Keen desire was scarcely veiled under Kimball's fiction of light patter. Smilingly the girl extended the case to him.

"Just to make it businesslike, the executrix demands your note for—um—sixty days, say. 'For one cigarette received I promise to pay'—"

"Given!" He pulled a gold pencil from his pocket and made a pretense of writing the form on his cuff. Then he lit his borrowed cigarette and inhaled it gratefully.

"Your captain friend's straight from Egypt; I don't have to be told that," Willy Kimball murmured in polite ecstasy. "At Shepard's, in Cairo, you'll get such a cigarette as this and nowhere else in a barren world. The reath of the acanthus blossom—if it really has a breath—never heard."

"Back in Kewanee the Ladies' Aid society will have you arrested," Kitty put in mischievously. "They're terribly wrought up over cigarettes—for minors."

Kimball cast her a glance of deep reproach. As he lifted the cigarette to his lip for a second puff Jane's eyes mechanically followed the movement. Something caught and held them, wonder filled.

On the side of the white paper cylinder nearest her a curious brown streak appeared. By the merest freak of chance her glance fell on it. As she looked the thin stain grew darker nearest the fresh ash. The farther end cerning her knowledge of the suspected officer.

To cap all, the message on the cigarette! An informer—she guessed the prefix to the unfinished word—had denounced "you" to General Crandall. To whom the proverb referred was unmistakable—Almer's eagerness to insure Captain Woodhouse's receiving the cigarette case plainly defined that. A hotel keeper warns an officer in the Gibraltar garrison that he has been denounced, but in the same message adjures him to "play your own game." That was the single compelling fact.

Jane Gerson flushed—in anger, or was it through guilt?—when she found her lips framing the word "spy!"

Now she understood why General Crandall had put her on the grill—why he, informed, had leaped to the significance of the gift of roses and deduced her previous acquaintance with their donor. Her host was not, after all, the possessor of magical powers of mind reading. He was, instead, just the sober, conscientious protector of the Rock on whom rested responsibility for the lives of its defenders and the maintenance of England's flag there. His duty was to catch—and shoot—spies.

Shoot spies! The girl's heart contracted at the thought. No, no! She would not, she could not, reveal to the governor the knowledge she had. That would be to send death to a man as surely as if hers was the finger at the trigger.

Jane Gerson was on her feet now, pacing the room. Over and over again she told herself that this man who had come into her life, obliquely enough, had no claim on her, had brought nothing to her but distress. He had deceived her even and then, when caught in the deception, had wrested from her a promise that she would help him continue further deception against others. Against her will he had made her a party to some deep and audacious plot whose purpose she could not guess, but which must be but a part of the huge mystery of war.

And soon this Captain Woodhouse was to come to his trial. The purpose of his invitation to tea that afternoon flashed clear as white light. Soon she would be in the same room with him, would be forced to witness the spinning of the web set to trap him. He would come unwarned, unsuspecting. He might leave that room under guard and with guns at his back—guns soon to be leveled at his heart. Yet she, Jane Gerson, possessed the power to save him, as the warring of the cigarette surely would be saving, once a clever man were put on his guard by it.

Would she speak—and betray General Crandall, her kindly host? Would she lock her lips and see a man walk blindfolded to his death?

A few minutes before 5 o'clock Major Bishop was announced at Government House and received by General Crandall in the library. Before Jaihim as loyal as any officer in the service." General Crandall put words enough emphasis to the rebuke for the other's implication. But the pesty little major was of the fine terms of personalship between himself and him to feel embarrassment. "Now plan for Woodhouse's reception affair of Craigen's wife; we well agree on points, so that he heard his wife's voice in the library and broke off. "Confound it! The women ing! Just step into my room and we'll go over this little major."

"This tea of George's is ous," the lady of Government was grumbling. "Said we this man from Egypt here at 'If you were English no be preposterous.' Jane with a brave attempt at light felt each passing moment prove the dog cart over the road. He waited his mistress' pleasure. The scattered blocks of olive gray on the field had coalesced into a solid regiment now, and the long, double rank of men was sweeping forward like the cutting arm of a giant mower. The party of Americans joined the sparse crowd of spectators at the edge of the field, the better to see. Jane Gerson found herself chatting with Willy Kimball and Kitty Sherman a little apart from the others. A light touch fell on her elbow. She turned to find Almer, the hotel keeper, smiling deferentially. "Pardon—a thousand pardons for the intrusion, lady. I am Almer of the Hotel Splendide."

"You haven't remembered something more I owe you?" Jane challenged brusquely.

"Oh, no, lady!" Almer spread out his hands. "I happened to see you here watching the parade, and I remembered a trivial duty I have which, if I may be so bold as to ask, you may discharge much more quickly than I—if you will."

"I discharge a duty—for you?" The girl did not conceal her puzzlement. Almer's hand fumbled in a pocket of his flapping alpaca coat and produced a plain silver cigarette case, unmonogrammed. She looked at it wonderingly.

"Captain Woodhouse—you met him at my hotel last night, lady. He left this lying on his dresser when he quit his room to go to barracks today. For me it is difficult to send a messenger with it to the barracks—wardtime, lady—many restrictions inside the lines. I came here hoping perhaps to see the captain after the parade. But you"—

"You wish me to give this to Captain Woodhouse?"

"You wish me to give this to Captain Woodhouse?" Jane finished, a flicker of annoyance crossing her face. "Why me?"

"You are at government house, lady. Captain Woodhouse comes to tea—all newcomers to the garrison do that. If you would be so good"—

Jane took the cigarette case from Almer's outstretched hand. Lady Crandall had told her the captain would be in for tea that afternoon. It was a small matter, this accommodation, as long as Almer did not insinuate—as he had not done—any impertinence; imply any overcaregerness on her part to perform so minor a service for the officer. Almer bowed his thanks and lost himself in the crowd. Jane turned again to where Kitty and Kimball were chatting.

"A dun for extra service the landlord forgot last night, I'll wager," the youth greeted her.

"Oh, no, just a little present," Jane laughed back at him, holding up the looked the thin stain grew darker nearest the fresh ash. The farther end of the faint tracing moved—yes, moved like a threadworm groping its way along a stick.

"Now, what are they all doing out there," Kitty Sherman was asking—"all those men running top speed with their guns carried up so high?"

"Bayonet charge," Kimball answered. "Nothing like the real thing, of course."

Jane Gerson was watching the twisting and writhing of that filament of brown against the white. An invisible hand was writing in brown ink on the side of the cigarette—writing backward and away from the burning tip. Letters of silver nitrate formed themselves under her eyes. Kimball took the cigarette from his lips and held it by his side for a minute. He and Kitty were busy with each other's company, for the time ignoring Jane. She burned with curiosity and with excitement mounting like the fire of wine to her brain. Would he never put that cigarette to his lips again, so she could follow the invisible pen? So fleeting, so evanescent, that worm track on the paper, wrought by fire and by fire to be consumed! A mystery vanishing even as it was aborning! After ages the unconscious Kimball set the cigarette again in his lips. —former has denounced you to Crandall—play your game and he will be slow to—

Again the cigarette came away in Kimball's hand. Acting on impulse she did not stop to question, Jane struck it from the young man's outstretched hand and set her foot on it as it fell in the dust.

"Oh, I'm clumsy!" She fell lightly against Kimball's shoulder and caught herself in well simulated confusion. "Standing tiptoe to see what that man on a horse is going to do, lost my balance. And—and your precious cigarette—gone!"

The anguish in Jane Gerson's voice was not play. It was real—terribly real.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Captain Comes to Tea.

JANE GERSON, alone for the first time since the incident of the cigarette on the parade ground a few hours back, sat before a narrow window in her room at Government House fighting a great bewilderment.

Could there now be any doubt of what she felt to be the truth? First, she had met Captain Woodhouse on the Express du Nord—an officer in the English army, by his own statement, returning from leave in England to his post in Egypt. Then the encounter of last night at the Hotel Splendide, Captain Woodhouse first denying his identity, then admitting it under the enforced pledge that she should not reveal the former meeting. Captain Woodhouse, not in Egypt, but at Gibraltar, and, as she had soon learned, there with papers of transfer from an Egyptian post to the garrison of the Rock. Following this surprise had come General Crandall's dogged examination of that morning—his blunt declaration that a serious question as to the captain's position at Gibraltar had arisen and his equally plain spoken threat to have the truth from her con-

"I have a little commission for you, Jaimihr."

Jaimihr Khan, who had preceded the visitor through the double doors from the hall, could retire his master stopped him.

"One minute, Jaimihr! Have a seat, Bishop. Glad you've come a bit early. Come here, Jaimihr."

The tall, reedlike figure of the Indian glided to General Crandall's side. His thin ascetic features were set in their usual mold of unseeing detachment. Only his dark eyes showed animation.

"Yes, my general," he said as he stopped before the Englishman.

"I have a little commission for you, Jaimihr," General Crandall began, weighing his words with care. "The utmost discretion. You understand?"

"The utmost, I understand," Jaimihr Khan's lips moved ever so slightly, and his eyes looked steadily ahead.

"In the course of a few minutes Captain Woodhouse of the signal service will be here to tea," the general began. The Indian repeated mechanically, "Cap-tain Wood-house."

"As soon as you have ushered him into this room you will go as quickly as you can to the west barracks. His room will be No. 36, on the second gallery. You will enter his room with a key I shall give you and search it from end to end—everything in it. Anything that is of a suspicious nature—you understand, Jaimihr, what that might be—you will bring here to me at once."

"It shall be done, General Sahib."

"No one, officer or man, must suspect your errand. No one must see you enter or leave that room."

"No one," the Indian repeated.

General Crandall went to a wall safe set by the side of the double doors, turned the combination and opened it. He took from a drawer therein a bunch of keys, selected one and passed it to Jaimihr Khan.

"The utmost care, remember!" he warned again.

"Is it likely I should fail you this time, General Sahib, when so many times I have succeeded?"

"Make the search complete," General Crandall ignored his servant's question. "But return as quickly as you can. I shall keep Captain Woodhouse here until you do so. You must report to me before he leaves this house."

"When the moment arrives your servant shall fly, General Sahib," the Indian replied, and withdrew.

"I say, general, you have a great deal of faith in your Indian," Bishop ventured, accepting a cigarette from his superior's case. "Rather a delicate commission you've given him."

"Absolute faith, yes. Been with me five years—picked him up in Rangoon—have tried him times and found with a brave attempt at high felt each passing moment adding to the suspense of the ble event.

"Well, I'm going to get with just as soon as I can," Crandall snapped. Then Jaimihr threw open the double door, nounced, "Cap-tain Wood-lady!"

"Show him up," she called. Then in complaint to Jaimihr where do you suppose that mine went? Just like him a tea and forget to make ance."

Captain Woodhouse appeared between the opened doors in trim puttees. He stood ve for an instant, his eyes shoc ly about the room. Lady Crandall cried forward to greet him, a mentary stiffness disappear girl behind her followed most reluctantly. Woodhouse her extended hand.

"It was good of you to send ers," she murmured. The appreciation.

"Do you know," he said sent them I thought you'd call a bit—prompt."

"I am learning something—about Englishmen," Jane Crandall answered, with a ghost of a smile.

Lady Crandall, who had been ringing for Jaimihr Khan, explained on the necessity of looking the tea things.

"I fancy you New Yorkers most from newness—newness of the shop," Jane heard it saying. "But the old thing best. Imagine the monks ago yesterday toasting their fore this ancient fireplace," toward the massive Gothic bridging a cavernous fireplace chimne bell, green with a bung on a low frame beside dogs.

"You're mistaken; that's true antiquity," Jane caught. "Lady Crandall told me last fireplace is just five years of the preceding governor's was."

Woodhouse caught at her with a quick lifting of the l turned again to feast his eyes on the girl's piquant face, even more now because of the fleeting left the cheeks with a tea ness.

After An Hour's Sickness Since "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

MR. MARRIOTT
Lees Ave., Ottawa, Ont., August 9th, 1915.

It is my duty to tell you what "Fruit-a-tives" has done for me. I began to feel run down, and suffered very much from Stomach and Kidney Trouble. I tried "Fruit-a-tives", and I could try them. The result was very good. During the 3½ years I had taken them regularly and I was able to do anything. I have been well since I came to "Fruit-a-tives", and I feel what I haven't known for years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking.

He had started forward at her outburst, and now he stood very close to her, his gray eyes cold and unchanging.

"Say it—say the word! I'm not afraid to hear it," he commanded tensely. She drew back from him a little wildly, her hands fluttering up, as if to fend him off.

"You—you are in great danger this minute. You were brought here this

"I was fully aware of that when I came, Miss Gerson," he interrupted. "The invitation, coming so suddenly—so pressing—I think I read it right."

"But the promise you made me give last night!" Sudden resentment brushed aside for the instant the girl's first flood of sympathy. "That has involved me with you. Oh, that was unfair—to make me promise I would not allude to—to our first meeting!"

"Involved you?" He closed one of her hands in his as if to calm her and force more rational speech. "Then you have been"— "Questioned by General Crandall—about you," she broke in, struggling slightly to free her hand. "Questioned—and even bullied and threatened."

"And you kept your promise?" The question was put so low Jane could hardly catch it. She slowly nodded.

"Miss Gerson, you will never have cause to regret that you did." Woodhouse pressed her hand with almost fierce intensity, then let it go. Her face was flaming now under the stress of excitement. She knew tears stood in her eyes and was angered at their being there. He might mistake them, Woodhouse continued in the same suppressed tone:

"You were on the point of using a word a minute ago, Miss Gerson, which was hard for you to voice because you thought it an ugly word. You seemed sure it was the right word to fit me. You only hesitated out of—ah—decency."

"After a fashion, yes," Woodhouse answered slowly. "Though three months is so short a time for one to get a lasting impression."

"Nonsense!" the general reproved gustily. "Some places you see once you never forget. This old Rock is one of the them, eh, Bishop?"

"I don't know," the chunky little officer replied. "The povers back home never give me a chance to get away and forget." There was a pause as the men sipped their tea. Woodhouse broke the silence:

"Man can be stationed in worse places than Gibraltar."

"Let me see, Captain Woodhouse"—it was little Bishop who took up the probe—"you must have been here in the days when Craigen was governor—saw your papers have it that you were here three months in nineteen seven."

"Yes, Craigen was governor then," Woodhouse answered guardedly.

"You never saw him, general." Bishop turned to Sir George. "Big, bluff, blustering chap, with a voice like the bull of Bashan. Woodhouse, here, he'll recognize my portrait."

Woodhouse smiled—secret disdain for the clumsy man was in that smile.

ing. But the man's nerve was steady even in extremity. He rose and turned to face the rear wall of the library, against the tapestry of which hung four oil portraits in their deep old frames of heavy gold. Three of these were of women. A fourth, also the likeness of a woman, hung over the fireplace. Chances were 4 to 1 against blind choice.

As Woodhouse slowly lifted his eyes to the line of portraits he noticed that Jane had moved to place the broad tent shade of a floor lamp on its tall standard of mahogany between herself and the other two men so that her face was momentarily screened from them. She looked quickly at the portrait over the mantel and away again. Woodhouse, knowing himself the object of two pairs of hostile eyes, made his survey deliberately, with purpose increasing the tension of the moment. His eyes ranged the line of portraits on the rear wall, then turned to that one over the fireplace.

"Ah, yes; a rather good likeness, eh, major?" He drawled his identification with a disinterested air.

Woodhouse could not conceal the start this:

Captain Woodhouse's shoulder she saw

CHAPTER XVII.

The Third Degree.

"GOOD afternoon, Captain Woodhouse." General Crandall came forward and shook the captain's hand cordially.
"Miss Gerson, Major Bishop of my staff."

Jane acknowledged the introduction.
Major Bishop advanced to the meeting with Woodhouse expectantly. With an air of ill assumed ease, the governor made them known to each other.

"Major Bishop, your new man in the signal tower, Captain Woodhouse, from Wady Halfa. Captain, do you happen to remember the major? Was a captain when you were here on the Rock—captain in the engineers."

"I'm afraid we never met," Woodhouse began easily. "I was here such a short time. Expected to meet Major Bishop when I reported at his office this morning, but he was over at the wireless station, his aid told me."

"Right, captain!" Bishop chirped, shaking his subordinate's hand. "I—ah—imagine this is the first time we've met." He put the least shade of emphasis on the verb.

Woodhouse met his eyes boldly.
Lady Crandall, bustling in at this minute, directed a maid where to wheel the tea wagon, while Jane went to assist her with the pouring. The men soon had their cups, and the general and major contrived to group themselves with Woodhouse sitting between them. Sir George, affecting a gruff geniality, launched a question:

"Rock look familiar to you, Captain?"

Woodhouse smiled—secret disdain for the clumsy trap was in that smile.

"I'm afraid I do not," he said. "Craigen was considered a small, almost a delicate man." He had recognized the bungling emphasis laid by Bishop on Craigen's characteristics, and his answer was pretty safely drawn by choosing the opposites. Bishop looked dustered for an instant, then admitted Woodhouse was right. He had confused Sir David Craigen with his predecessor, he said in excuse.

"I fancy I ought to remember the man. I had tea in this very room with him several times," Woodhouse ventured. He let his eyes rove as if in reminiscence. "Much the same here—as—except, General Crandall, I don't recall that fireplace." He indicated the heavy gothic ornament on the opposite side of the room.

Jane caught her breath under the surge of secret elation. The resource of the man so to turn to advantage a fact that she had carelessly given him in their conversation of a few minutes back! The girl saw a flicker of surprise cross General Crandall's face.
Lady Crandall broke in:

"You have a good memory after all, Captain Woodhouse. That fireplace is just five years old."

"Um—yes, yes," her husband admitted. "Clever piece of work, though.
Likely to deceive anybody by its show of antiquity."

General Crandall called for a second slice of lemon in his cup. He was obviously sparring for another opening, but was impressed by the showing the suspected man was making.
Bishop pushed the inquisition, another step:

"Did you happen to be present, captain, at the farewell dinner we gave little Billy Barnes? I think it must have been in the spring you were here."

"There were many dinners, Major Bishop." Woodhouse was carefully selecting his words, and he broke his sentences with a sip from his cup.
"Seven years is a long time, you know.
We had much else to think about in Egypt than old dinners elsewhere."

Bishop appeared struck by an inspiration. He clapped his cup into his saucer with a sudden bang.

"Hang it, man, you must have been here in the days of Lady Evelyn. Remember her, don't you?"

"Would I be likely to forget?" the captain parried. Out of the tail of his eye he had a flash of Jane Gerson's white face, of her eyes seeking his with a palpitant, hunted look. The message of her eyes brought to him an instant of grace in sore trial.

General Crandall rose to set his cup on the tea wagon. With the most casual air in the world, he addressed himself to Woodhouse:

"When Sir David died many of his effects were left in this house to await their proper owner's disposition, and Lady Craigen has been—er—delicate about claiming them. Among them was the portrait of Lady Craigen herself, which still hangs in this room.
Have you recognized it, captain?"

Woodhouse, whose mind had been leaping forward vainly trying to divine the object of the Lady Evelyn lead, now knew, and the knowledge left him beyond his resources. He recognized the moment of his unmask-

Crandall's manner underwent instant change. His former slightly strained punctiliousness gave way to naturalness and easy spirits. One would have said he was advocate for a man on trial for whom the jury had just pronounced, "Not proved." Scotch verdict, yes, but one acceptable enough to the governor of Gibraltar. The desk telephone sounded just then, and General Crandall answered. After listening briefly he gave the orders, "Dress flags!" and hung up the receiver.

"Fleet's just entering the harbor," signal tower reports," he explained to the others. "Miss Gerson, if you care to step here to the window you'll see something quite worth while."

BEATS THE GERMAN DOLL.

Canadian Manufacturer Says Problem is Solved.

Something of a sensation was caused at the Toy Fair in Toronto when a manufacturer announced that he had succeeded in making a better doll than the once-famous article produced in Germany. Several previous attempts resulted in failure. Manufacturers in Canada and the United States have tried for years, since the war especially, to duplicate the German dolls, but have never had much success. There was something the matter in the process, but was of such a nature that the trouble could never be found. One large doll house established a kiln and secured the services of several foreigners who had previously worked in toy factories in Europe but the finished article was of a very poor grade. Finally one of the Germans employed in the chemical department volunteered the information that the clay used in his country and the atmosphere were responsible for the high grade dolls.

Last spring at the Toy Fair the subject of producing a better doll than the Germans was discussed, both pro and con. Most toy men thought the task impossible, but one maker thought it could be done. He secured the services of a French and English sculptor and an Italian expert on bisque. Several Italian mechanics were also engaged and the work started. After numerous difficulties and setbacks from time to time he produced a doll which, it is claimed, is better than those produced in Germany. The head is better and will stand much more hard usage. One large wholesaler stated that the doll is excellent and will find a big market if the price is right.

Dolls are the largest item on every buyers' list and for years great sums have been spent in the United States and in foreign countries for this class of toy. Receipts in the different stores throughout the country have been enormous and Canadian manufacturers are determined to keep this trade in Canada.

POULTRY HOUSE SITE.

High Ground Best Location For All Seasons of the Year.

High ground is the best location for the poultry house, according to T. S. Townsley, assistant in poultry husbandry in the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Dryness is a most important factor to be considered in the selection of a site for the poultry house. Dampness is one of the greatest enemies of poultry. The soil on which the house is built should have good drainage. This may be obtained by selecting high ground or soil that is sandy or of light gravel.

A high location is desirable in winter also because of the air drainage. The cold air flows into low places and causes frozen combs and tees in poultry wintering there. A southern slope is preferable because it is warmest in winter and dries quickly after a rain. A northern exposure should be avoided, for it is cold in winter and warms up late in the spring.

DISEASE OF CABBAGE.

Careful Seed Selection Has Produced a Variety Resistant to Yellows.

Successful cabbage growers near Clyde, O., after six years' trials in co-operation with the Ohio experiment station have obtained strains resistant to yellows disease, or fusarium wilt. The All Seasons variety has shown the least tendency to this disease, and it also possesses qualities demanded by the brant industry. Plants have been selected for seed which have shown the strongest growth and the greatest freedom from disease.

This procedure in combating cabbage yellows has proved far more successful than soil sterilization and other direct control methods, growers say. Under conditions of continual attack by disease certain plants develop characteristics that ward off ravages of such parasites. By continual careful selection and propagation desired types are produced that thrive even where disease is abundant, while common varieties die or else yield poor returns.

The especially resistant strains of the All Seasons cabbage have been named the Clyde Series Nos. 1 to 7. Nos. 1, 2 and 4 have proved most resistant. Within a year or two the experiment station expects to distribute the seed of these strains to growers.

TOMATO GROWING PAYS ON THE GENERAL FARM

By C. C. BOWSFIELD.

One of the greatest of the money making commodities is the tomato. This product is important enough to be considered by farmers generally.

While tomatoes are classed as garden products, I prefer to look on them as a field crop worth the best efforts of all farmers. W. A. Carr, an expert tomato grower of Minneapolis, has had the big money is. He relates his experience in this way:

"I plant tomato seeds Feb. 10 in shallow boxes in the greenhouse, making a trench a half inch deep with the edge of a trowel and dropping the seeds in it one-half inch apart. The trenches are one and one-half inches apart. I scatter fine dirt over the seed with a sifter and then spread a damp cloth over the box and leave the seed to germinate, which takes five or six days. When the plants have two or three leaves they are transplanted to the hotbed, either being planted directly in the soil or else in cheap wooden boxes, four inches each way and four inches deep, with loose bottoms. The boxes are convenient for the second transplanting, but I am undecided whether they are worth the time and trouble. If these boxes are not used a clump of dirt six inches in diameter is taken up with the plant when it is transplanted out of doors, which takes place as soon as the danger of frost is over. By this time the plants are in blossom and sometimes the fruit has begun to appear. Great pains must be taken with this second transplanting. A good way to do is to dig trenches four feet apart and place the plants in the trench four feet from each other, tamping the ground firmly about the roots. Water should be used in this transplanting, especially if the soil is a little dry. Most of the dirt that was thrown out of the trench is left lying to be turned in by the cultivator, by which time it is warmed by the sun and will hasten growing.

"The chief enemy to watch in tomato growing is blight, which will make itself apparent when the ends of the leaves turn brown and wither. This can be successfully overcome by spraying with bordeaux mixture. I usually dip my plants in a weak solution before the second transplanting and then aim to give them a second spraying. Don't be afraid of getting it on the fruit. It won't injure it."

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cut out all dead trees about the place and make firewood of them.

One quarter acre of berries will not cost much to plant, and it will give an abundance of fruit the season through.

There is still time to do some root grafting of apples. The cion should be two or three times as long as the root.

Plan to do some topworking this spring. This is a good way to get returns from unproductive trees that are thrifty.

When ordering seed for the garden try some vegetables you have not used before. Salsify, Swiss chard and endive are good sorts to try.

The Wealthy is one of the most widely grown and profitable of the fall apples. It is a money maker, even in apple districts.

ORCHARD PLANTING.

Proper Distances Apart at Which to Set Various Fruit Trees.

The proper planting distance at which to set fruit trees needs careful attention. Prominent growers set peach trees at least twenty feet apart. Although some set the trees sixteen to eighteen feet apart, this has proved too close. Peach trees set at this distance cannot secure sufficient light, plant food and moisture to develop properly and a good cover crop cannot be grown under these conditions.

Large growing varieties of apples, such as Baldwin, Stayman and Gravenstein, are at the maximum distance of forty feet apart. In certain sections where these varieties grow smaller, because of soil conditions, thirty-six feet is sufficient. Varieties of medium size, such as Rome, McIntosh and Twenty Ounce, do best when set thirty-six feet apart. For the smaller growing and upright varieties, as Wealthy, Duchess and Yellow Transparent, thirty to thirty-two feet is suitable. Where fillers are placed between permanent trees the latter are set forty feet apart. Plums are set at a distance of twenty feet apart, pears twenty, sour cherries twenty to twenty-five and sweet cherries thirty to thirty-five feet.

HANDLING INCUBATORS TO GET GOOD RESULTS

If spring "fries" and fall eggs are desired the incubator should be set the first or second week in February, giving a hatch the early part of March, according to T. S. Townsley, instructor in poultry husbandry in Kansas Agricultural college.

The main purposes of an early hatch is to allow the pullets ample time to mature before cold weather. If they do not do this they will not lay until the following spring. Cockerels hatched in March will be ready to sell when the market for fries is good. The early hatched chicks will be large enough to be turned out on the ground by the time grass and other plants have started to grow and will thus get the advantage of the green feed.

Before starting the incubator it is advisable to spray the machine thor-

BACKACHE, LUMBAGO, RHEUMATIC T

Dear Mr. Editor—I wish I suffered greatly from backache and rheumatic trouble. "Anuric," the latest discovery of Pierce for backache and kidney and I can cheerfully recommend "Anuric Tablets" to anyone from any of these maladies.

Yours truly,
J. F. GARR

NOTE: It is now asserted that these painful uric acid in the system are caused. A new remedy, called "Anuric," has been discovered by Dr. Pierce, the cause of uric acid with which it comes within the body. It will ward off backache, headache, and the darts of articular or muscularism—of those diseases which by too much uric acid, such as asthma, sciatica, renal calculus, prolongs life because of the sufferer from hardening of the walls of the arteries excess of uric acid in the tissues.

Dr. Pierce, who is direct physician at the Invalids Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., has been testing this wonderful relief of over-worked kidneys. The relief obtained has been so satisfactory that he has placed "Anuric" in the principal druggists in town. "Anuric" is not harmful, but aids nature in throwing out the poisons within the body which much suffering, pain and mistis assert this remedy is 3 potent than lithia. Send large trial package.

GOOD DAIRY RA

Cows Should Be Fed In With Their Milk Professor C. H. Eckles

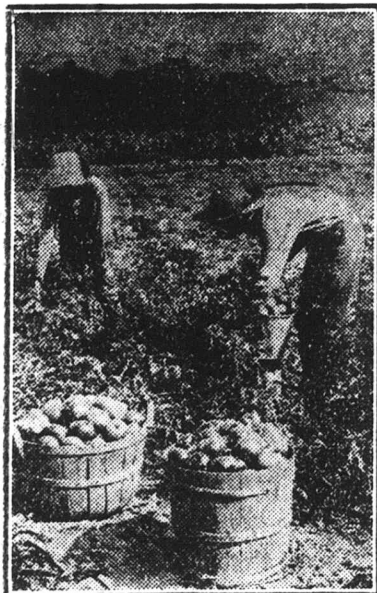

souri station is a wise concern matters pertaining to dairies has made a close study of of compounding dairy ration advice is well worth heed. In a recent press bulletin he pointed out good and economical dairy based upon corn silage and a little hay, such as clover or cowpea. If these are plentiful the problem is much simplified. Grain ration to go with the four parts; bran, one part, seed or linseed, one part.

Corn, even at the present time, is the cheapest source of dig all farmers. W. A. Carr, an expert tomato grower of Minneapolis, has had a yield as high as 600 bushels per acre. As tomatoes are worth $1.50 to $3 a bushel, this rate of earnings puts them in a class by themselves.

Mr. Carr advises people who have no greenhouses to start the plants in hotbeds made out of storm windows and rough lumber. Barn manure can be used for heat. Starting early, he gets an early crop, and that's where

Being in demand for canning purposes as well as for universal table use when fresh picked, tomatoes have become recognized as a leading staple. Few garden products are so widely used, and it would be hard to name one that pays better. Illustration shows tomato pickers at work.

Silage For Dairy Bulls.

There has been some disagreement among dairymen relative to the effect of feeding silage to bulls in service. It is generally agreed, however, that feeding large quantities of silage does have a detrimental effect in making the bull sluggish and lowering his worth as a breeder. We advise therefore that not more than ten to fifteen pounds be fed per day.—Hoard's Dairyman.

Temperature of Milk For Calves.

Under natural conditions milk consumed by the young calf has a temperature of approximately 100 degrees. It has been found by experience that a slight variation from this temperature may cause indigestion. Especially is this true with calves under two months of age. The chief point is uniformity in the temperature of the milk at all times.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Too much cannot be said about the way in which cows should be treated in the stable.

Be generous and kind to the heifers. They will repay you as soon as they become cows.

When unpedigreed cows sell for $120 at public sale the wisdom of saving the heifer calf becomes self evident.

If possible water should be supplied to cows in the stable.

The increase in yield from a herd of cows would quickly repay the expense of a covered barnyard, where the herd can rest and take some exercise through the day.

The Rhode Island Reds have yellow skins, their bones are well covered with meat, and they have a round and handsome appearance when dressed. Rhode Island Red hens are excellent sitters, make the best of mothers and bring the chickens along quickly and manufacture good broilers early. The Reds are very active and are great "rustlers," but they are not wild, and a four foot fence will hold them. The bird pictured is a Single Comb Rhode Island Red cock.

The cow herewith pictured, Cherry 25523, has earned the world's champion senior old Jersey. She went on years and eleven months in 365 days produced 12,560 of milk, containing 749.87 fat. This exceeds the record was made by Lad's Lady, Irene, the former champion.

oughly with a 2 per cent solution of coal tar disinfectant. This will kill any germs or spores that may have lived through the winter. The incubator should be kept in a warm room, preferably a cellar, in order that outside weather conditions will not cause the temperature of the machine to drop to a dangerous point.

The incubator should be run two or three days to test the temperature before the eggs are put in. The machine should be kept at a temperature of 101 degrees the first week, 102 degrees the second week and 103 degrees the third week. The thermometer should be kept on a level with the top of the eggs.

The lamp should be filled and the wick carefully trimmed each day. The eggs should be turned and cooled before taking care of the lamp, because if there is any grease or oil on the hands when the eggs are handled it will injure the hatching qualities of the eggs. They should be turned every day for the first eighteen days. It is a good plan to move the eggs at the outside of the tray to the inside to overcome any difference in temperature. Beginning with the third day the eggs should be cooled each time they are turned.

Cottonseed meal, distillate, brewers' grains and linseed are the cheapest sources of mixture of corn and cottonseed meal alone would not be a good ration, is too heavy—that is, it is too much in the stomach, while the five juices cannot penetrate. Bran, dried beet pulp, and grain are the best feedstuffs to lighten a ration. For this reason these are nearly always the ration fed heavy milk cows, requiring liberal grain feeding.

The most difficult question this winter is how liberal should be to feed dairy cows. The general rule, feeding a cow to capacity is the most economical. The farmer goes to the expense of maintaining the cow it is not fair to make use of her productivity. A good rule for pricing is to give the cow as much as she will eat, silage and legume hay, clean, then feed in a pound of grain to each pound of milk for a Jersey and a pound of grain for each four pounds of milk for a Holstein.

A dairy cow should be in good condition at time of calving. The milk she gives when first calving shows her capacity. She should be fed enough to support her production. A cow that does not give the inheritance to give twenty pounds of milk daily made to give forty by liberal feeding. However, the cow giving forty pounds will not do so long unless sufficient feed is given to furnish the raw material for this much product.

It is not economy to feed the same amount of feed to a cow that should be fed in accordance with her production. A heavy cow given a light milking cow but does not increase her ordinary limit.

Editor—I wish to state that I have greatly benefited from the use of the latest discovery of Doctor Pierce's Backache and Kidney Pills. I cheerfully recommend the tablets to anyone suffering from these maladies.

Yours truly,

It is now asserted with confidence that these painful effects due to the system are entirely eradicated by a remedy called "Anuric," discovered by Dr. Pierce, and is a natural drainage outward of the system which it comes in contact with. It will ward off backache, and the darting pains and muscular rheumatic diseases which are caused by uric acid, such as gout, catarrh, renal calculus, etc. It is a life-saver because old people usually suffer from hardening and thickening of the arteries, due to the uric acid in the blood and

Dr. J. C. Pierce, who is director and chief of the Invalids' Hotel and Sanatorium, Buffalo, N. Y., has discovered this wonderful medicine for overworked and weakened people. The relief obtained by sufferers is so satisfactory that he determines to "Anuric" with the principle in town where people are ready-to-use medicine. Be Fed In Accordance With Milk Production.

C. H. Eckles of the Michigan State Board of Dairying is a wise counselor on dairying. He has made a close study of the question of feeding dairy rations, and his conclusions are worth heeding. In a recent bulletin he points out that the economical dairy rations are corn silage and some legume such as clover, alfalfa or these are plentiful for the feed. The ration is much simplified. ## FORMAL GOWN.

Gorgeous Creation For the Season's Evening Wear.

BEAUTIFUL LINES.

SAVE YOUR IRISH CROCHET.

This Lace Is Coming Into Vogue Again With Spring.

Have you heard the news? Irish crochet is coming back into favor for all sorts of things—lingerie blouses, neckwear and even frock trimming. It isn't used exactly as it used to be, but any one possessing one of those lovely large, round Dutch collars or a set of collar and cuffs is fortunate in that she can turn the collar and cuffs into something entirely different without cutting the lace.

For chemise tops and nightgown yokes the Irish crochet is indeed lovely. Two of those old time "choker" collars could be utilized to set in the back and the front of either garment. If you do not possess such things as choker collars watch the little lace

GAVE A HOSPITAL

ATTENDS FRIEND AND FOE.

Daughter of Paran Stevens of Boston Married an English Nobleman and Founded a Hospital That Did Remarkable Service in Serbia.

The Austro-Hungarian government has made public a high official tribute to the services rendered in Serbia by Lady Paget and her hospital. It is one of the rare occasions in this great war in which one belligerent nation has said a kind word, even in the name of humanity, about the subject of an enemy nation.

Lady Paget's hospital work in Serbia is well known to Americans, for she labored in direct co-operation with the American Red Cross. Says the report: "Even under the Servian regime it was thanks to Lady Paget's mission among our prisoners that the epidemic of typhus did not have more victims. In her hospital she continually nursed 70 per cent of our soldiers. Those who recovered were well nourished and given clean linen and shoes before they were sent to the prison camp. The attendants in her hospital she recruited entirely out of our soldiers, who were well fed and housed. She always gave them clean linen, good clothes and good shoes. Lady Paget repeatedly visited our prison camp and did all she could to induce the Servians to be humane in their treatment of our people. The lady herself was the soul of the mission.

Recamier poses, and a day bed is the piece de resistance of the fashionable boudoir. back and the front of either garment. If you do not possess such things as choker collars watch the little lace shops, which deal in such articles. You may be able to strike a bargain.

A round collar can be set in as a round yoke in a nightgown, with cuffs to match as finishes for the short kimono sleeves. Sometimes cuffs can be used as shoulder straps on a chemise, with the round collar set in as a motif.

On blouses the Irish lace collar can be used in a bolero effect, for a vest, revers, bib or little coatee, depending entirely on the cut and shape.

On frocks the uses of Irish lace are legion. On such fabrics as linens, organdies and voiles for spring and summer wear Irish collars can be used to outline deep pockets, in bib effects, to define panels and apron fronts, to edge deeper collars and in the same ways as they are used on blouses.

If you have some fine piece of this once popular lace stored away get it out and start to bleach it in the frost so that you will have it all fresh and ready to use when spring sewing starts in.

New Blouses.

Some of the latest blouses are singularly soft and graceful. A few fashioned from black net over white are made with a few perpendicular tucks, the sleeves full to the wrist, with a frill falling over the hand. Even the crepe de chine blouses are, many of them, made with a pointed piece falling from the wristband over the hand, the blouse itself opening in a V form at the neck, the edge with an open hemstitch about an inch wide. Brown is a fashionable blouse color, and brown chiffon tucked and worn over gold net is altogether charming. Vivid coloring, even in the embroideries, is not now the first fashion. The soft silk ones are wrought in dull shades, but are all the more effective for their subdued hues.

Hush! A Garter Purse.

If you are addicted to the bad habit of carrying your valuables and money with you wherever you go you should provide yourself with one of the new garter purses. They are made of two pockets, one large for jewels the other small for money, and both attached to straps to buckle tightly around the leg below the knee. They come in all shades of satin.

A Delightful Combination.

Speaking of satin slip over blouses, what do you think of this costume? It is a slip over blouse of dark blue satin smocked in the shoulders with white silk and showing a novel collar and cuffs of white satin. It is worn with a box pleated white flannel skirt. Sounds stunning, doesn't it?

Silver Lace and Pale Blue Silk.

Silver lace and pale blue silk is an effective combination for the debutante, and it is carried out in one model in flounces of silver lace over a skirt of faint blue soiree silk, and underneath is a second skirt of silver cloth. The blue soiree silk bodice is trimmed with bands of silver ribbon and flesh pink tulle in a single airy layer, giving the debutante touch at the shoulder, for the young girl does not wear an entirely sleeveless bodice. Pale pink roses shading to orchid tone are caught against girdle and skirt hem.

"As a result of Lady Paget's friendly treatment of the Austro-Hungarian prisoners she became the victim of suspicion in England and had to justify herself in a London meeting. There she declared—for we have read the speech which she made there—that she would continue her activity and if the standpoint that she took was not acceptable she would give up her post as the leader of this mission."

Lady Paget is American born, the daughter of Paran Stevens, at one time owner of the Tremont House in Boston. Her husband is General Sir Arthur H. Paget. Lady Paget's benefactions have been remarkable. During the Boer war she equipped a hospital ship and called it the Maine. She made a great collection of furniture of the period of James I. for the Jamestown exposition. She has been extremely popular in British society, particularly in the reign of Edward VII.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

How to Make Raffia Dolls on Stormy Days.

If you have been making raffia baskets or picture frames save some of the leftover pieces of raffia for the children. They can make a whole family of dolls from them.

For a good sized father or mother doll the strips should be about fourteen inches long and plain colored. Just in the center tie them with a colored bit of raffia. The number of the strips you use will depend upon how fat you want your doll.

Next double the raffia over exactly in two and tie again about an inch from the top. Now you have the doll's head. Tie again at the waist and cut the skirt off evenly at the bottom if it is to be a lady doll.

If it is a man separate the raffia at the waist and tie his trousers at the bottoms.

For arms put a few strands of raffia through the body and tie at the wrist and shoulder. Your raffia must be long enough for both arms.

The children of the raffia family will be made the same way, but smaller.

Yukon's First Recruit.

The first recruit from the Yukon, Lieut. Howard Grestock, has been killed in action, according to a private cable received at Ottawa. When word of war reached Dawson City Lieut. Grestock "hit the trail" and journeyed all the way to Ottawa at his own expense to enlist. He joined at Valcartier the Strathcona Horse, with which he had fought in South Africa. Outside of the battle of St. Julien, he has participated in every Canadian fight. He went over as a private and for over a year was with the Strathconas as head of the grenade section. He was given a commission later and transferred to the 73rd Battalion. He was reported missing on February 4 and is now reported killed.

The Pineapple a Blossom.

The pineapple is a solidified blossom, say the horticultural experts, and it is pineapple blossom time from June to October in Hawaii. There 7,000 acres are given over to the cultivation of this fruit. In 1914 Hawaii exported 1,000,000 cases of canned pineapple and 100,000 cases of the juice.

supposedly informal and natural poses is coining a fortune in Recamier-like portraits with luxuriously pillowed day beds as the central idea.

For the small apartment the day bed—which can, of course, be used as an ordinary sleeping bed by night—is a most useful and attractive bit of furniture far surpassing in grace the ungainly folding bed of another generation or the folding davenport of recent years, which always had a two faced look about it and suggested hidden bedding by the awkward height of its seat. The day bed may be had in Adam style and made of mahogany, with upholstered velvet cushions, for about $50. In painted wood, with gracefully curved ends and denim covered cushion, it costs about $30. Of course gilded wood or ivory enamel and cane day beds in empire style may add anything from $60 to $200 to the bill for boudoir furnishing.

A Chest For Her Dowry.

Nowadays the bride to be realizes the necessity of a suitable receptacle in which to lay her dowry of linen and lingerie. Of late she has turned somewhat to the conveniences of a wardrobe with half its interior fitted with drawers, but on the whole she leans to the custom of her grandmothers and great-great-grandmothers for centuries back and selects a chest which, according to its design, may afterward either be converted to storeroom uses or put into the hall or bedroom as a useful as well as an ornamental piece of furniture.

A visit to a museum will afford a glimpse of some of the most beautiful specimens of early dower chests upon which the mediaeval wood carvers expended their art, often supplemented by the insertion of rare paintings done by famous artists.

Overheated Air.

A rise of temperature in the surrounding air diminishes the amount of oxygen consumed and the amount of dioxide discharged. A fall of temperature has the opposite effect. In addition, the overheated air forms a hot jacket around the body which prevents the radiation of heat necessary to keep the body in a healthy condition. With a sedentary occupation a temperature of from 64 to 70 should be maintained for comfort and health.

Many Certificates Sold.

Through the agency of the banks and the post offices approximately 75,000 war savings certificates have been sold to date. It is only slightly over nine weeks since these securities were first placed on the market, yet in that time over $5,000,000 have been realized by their sale.

In making this statement to the press the Minister of Finance pointed out that the new certificates were well patronized during the period of the war loan. Daily sales ran as high as $150,000, and the average is well over $100,000.

Large corporations continue to take steps to interest their employees in the advisability of investing their surplus earnings in the war savings certificates. One firm has advised the department that by introducing a scheme of pay deduction in one month the employees pledged themselves to purchase certificates aggregating $25,000.

FREDERICK W. SMITH

One of Napanee's most and highly respected business men passed away on Monday morning after an illness of a few weeks. Frederick W. Smith, who was a member of the firm of F. W. Bro., Jewellers, has been one of Napanee's most successful business men for over forty years and by his courtesy and fair dealing he held the confidence of the public. He was not taking any active part in local affairs. Mr. Smith was as a staunch upholder of progress in the town, and his death is a distinct loss to the community of Napanee. The funeral will be on Wednesday from 10 o'clock to Riverside Cemetery. The funeral was under Masonic rites. One son, Mr. H. E. Smith resided in Napanee.

THE LATE MISS SMITH

Miss Louise Smith of Kingston on Saturday morning at the home of her brother, W. C. Smith, and her passing has brought sorrow to many. As was her habit when sickness or trouble came to her family home she was the one to whom all turned for comfort and hence when the word came that her brother, Frederick, was ill, she, with nurses, hastened to his bedside in Napanee. There she remained until she died. Her illness, pneumonia developed and she came Saturday morning. Her remains were taken to Kingston on Sunday night.

Miss Smith, devoted, loving and has for years been the comfort and consolation to many. She was honored in Kingston for her many qualities of head and heart. She was of parents early in life she looked to deceased for inspiration and direction. And they received a stunted measure. She gave comfort for them and cherished them as she has gone hence. Those left are two sisters, Mary and Etta; three brothers, William, Napanee; O. George, Kingston; Frank, London. One brother John S., died in Napanee last, and Fred on Monday.

MARRIAGES.

OBITUARY

There passed away at her late residence, South Centre Street, Napanee, on Friday, May 4th, Mrs. A. A.
Currie, wife of the late Andrew Currie, at the advanced age of 85 years and 8 months. Her maiden name was Christie A. Carr. She was born at Black Creek, Prince Edward County, where she resided with her parents until she was seventeen years of age. She was married to A. A.
Currie, of Cherry Valley, with whom she lived for forty-seven years.

Five children are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother, CharHe of Pattle Creek, Michigan; Leslie of Cody, Penn.; Mrs. Scott of Picton; Mrs. Munroe, of Woodstock, and Miss Katie at home. The late Mrs. Currie was very active and busy when able, having just completed knitting her sixtieth pair of socks for the soldiers. The remains were taken to Cherry Valley on Monday, for interment in the family plot.

A GOOD THING GONE WRONG.
Had Napanee been blessed with an
A I up-to-date hotel the citizens might have been benefited by the location in our town of a Moving Picture Film Co. In the early part of the week Mr. McArthur, representing a Moving Picture Film Co., arrived in town and informed the powers that be that if ample hotel accommodation could be provided his company would like to locate a branch of their business in Napanee. They asked for no favors of any kind or description.
They would erect buildings costing about $150,000, and were prepared to commence work immediately. The present hotel accommodations were not of sufficiently high order to amply meet the needs of the artists who were engaged in the production of moving picture films. A number of our enterprising citizens got together and arrangements made for a meeting in the council chamber on Monday evening.
A fairly representative gathering was present and an effort towards the organizing of a joint stock company was put forth. An option was secured on the Campbell House property, and it was proposed to organize a company with a capital of $50,000.
The hotel property could be purchased for $20,000. It was suggested that $25,000 worth of stock be sold $5,000 to be paid towards the purchase of the property, the balance being secured by a mortgage. The other $20,000 would be used to thoroughly overhaul and renovate the interior of the buildings, and make it an up-to-date hotel in every particular. Considerable discussion took place and finally five progressive citizens were appointed a committee to endeavor to secure sufficient subscribers to form the company. We understand the effort has proven a failure and the bottom has dropped out of the project.

1st.—Because it has proved itself and vindicated unfair criticism.
2nd.—Because it has pep and getaway found in no other car.
3rd.—Because it is comfortable to ride in, easy to drive and has abundance of power.
4th.—Because its Equipment is complete—Electric Starter, Electric Light with Dimmers, Ammeter, Oil Indicator, Speedometer, Tire
